Versteigerungsbedingungen

Mit der Teilnahme an der Versteigerung werden folgende Bestimmungen anerkannt: Die angegebenen Preise sind Schätzpreise in Schweizer Franken. Der Ausruf erfolgt in der Regel bei 80%, sofern nicht höhere Angebote vorliegen. Zum Erstchungspreis wird ein Aufgeld von 15% sowie zusätzlich die Warenumsatzsteuer von 6,2% auf Silbermedaillen und -münzen und auf Goldmedaillen hinzugerechnet, sofern die Auslieferung in der Schweiz stattfindet. Der Gesamtpreis ist nach erfolgtem Zuschlag fällig und bei der Aushändigung in Schweizer Franken zu bezahlen.

Für verspätete Zahlungen berechnen wir die banküblichen Verzugszinsen.

Der Zuschlag erfolgt nach dreimaligem Aufruf des höchsten Gebotes und verpflichtet zur Annahme. Schriftliche Gebote haben den Vorrang. Jeder Ersteigerer verpflichtet sich für die durch ihn getätigten Käufe persönlich. Er kann nicht geltend machen, für Rechnung Dritter gehandelt zu haben.

Für die Echtheit der Münzen wird vorbehaltlos und zeitlich unbeschränkt garantiert. Alle Angaben im Katalog wurden nach bestem Wissen und Gewissen zusammengestellt.

Der Versand der Münzen erfolgt normalerweise eingeschrieben und versichert zu Lasten des Empfängers. Im Ausland verrechnete Gebühren und Steuern gehen zu Lasten des Käufers. Es obliegt dem Erwerber, sich über ausländische Zoll- und Devisenvorschriften zu informieren. Die Veranstalterin der Auktion übernimmt keine Haftung für allfälliges Zuwiderhandeln solcher Vorschriften.

Der Auktionator ist befugt, von der im Katalog aufgeführten Reihenfolge abzugehen und Nummern zu vereinigen. Es erfolgt keine Aufteilung der Lose. Erfüllungsort und Gerichtsstand im Verhältnis zwischen der Veranstalterin und dem Erwerber ist Zürich. Die Abgabe eines schriftlichen oder mündlichen Gebotes bedeutet gleichzeitig die Anerkennung der vorerwähnten Auktionsbedingungen. Im übrigen kommen die örtlichen Gantbedingungen zur Anwendung. Vorliegende Bedingungen liegen in deutscher, französischer, italienischer und englischer Fassung auf. Bei Meinungsverschiedenheiten ist die deutsche Fassung massgebend.

Conditions de la vente aux enchères

En participant à la vente, les conditions suivantes sont considérées comme acceptées.

Les prix indiqués sont des prix estimatifs en francs suisses.

La vente débute en principe avec 80% du prix d'estimation, pour autant qu'il n'y ait pas d'offres plus élevées. Sur le prix d'acquisition une majoration de 15% sera prélevée et, en supplément, l'impôt sur le chiffre d'affaire de 6,2% (ICHA). Ceci pour les médailles et monnaies en argent et les médailles en or, si la livraison a lieu en Suisse. Le prix total, y compris les majorations, est payable en francs suisses à réception des médailles et monnaies.

En cas de paiements tardifs, nous calculons un intérêt de retard au cours bancaire.

L'adjudication a lieu après le 3^e rappel de l'offre la meilleure et oblige l'acheteur à prendre son acquisition.

A prix égal, les offres écrites ont la priorité.

Chaque participant à la mise s'oblige pour les achats effectués par lui-même. Il ne peut faire valoir, avoir agi pour un tiers.

Nous garantissons l'authenticité des monnaies sans conditions et sans aucune limite de temps. Les indications de notre catalogue ont été étudiées avec le plus grand soin.

L'envoi des pièces a lieu en principe, inscrit et assuré, aux frais du destinataire. Pour l'étranger, toutes taxes ou impôts prélevés sont à charge du destinataire. L'acquéreur doit lui-même s'informer sur les prescriptions douanières et des devises du pays d'importation. La maison organisatrice de la vente ne peut-être tenue pour responsable au cas où les prescriptions mentionnées ci-dessous ne seraient pas respectées. L'organisateur de la vente est autorisé à modifier l'ordre figurant dans le catalogue et à associer plusieurs numéros. Les lots ne seront pas séparés. Comme domicile juridique, il est admis entre l'organisatrice et les acheteurs, Zurich, ceci en cas de différences.

La remise d'une offre écrite ou verbale signifie en même temps l'acceptation des conditions précitées de vente aux enchères. Les conditions locales de mise aux enchères seront appliquées et celles-ci sont disponibles dans les langues allemande, française, italienne et anglaise. En cas de différences d'interprétation le texte allemand fait foi.

Condizioni di vendita

La partecipazione alla vendita all'asta comporta l'accettazione integrale delle presenti condizioni. I prezzi indicati rappresentano le stime dei lotti in franchi svizzeri. Se non vi sono offerte più elevate, l'inizio di battuta d'asta corrisponde di regola all'80% circa del valore di stima. Al prezzo di aggiudicazione verrà aggiunto un diritto d'asta del 15% e sarà prelevata l'imposta sulla cifra d'affari (ICA) del 6,2% per le medaglie e le monete d'argento e bronzo e medaglie d'oro consegnate sul territorio svizzero. Il prezzo totale sarà esigibile al momento dell'aggiudicazione e pagabile in franchi svizzeri alla consegna dei lotti.

In caso di ritardi nel pagamento sarà calcolato un interesse di uso bancario sul totale dovuto.

L'aggiudicazione avviene dopo la terza chiamata della migliore offerta e obbliga l'acquirente ad accettarla.

In caso di parità di offerta ha la precedenza quella ricevuta per corrispondenza.

Ogni partecipante alla vendita all'asta è personalmente responsabile degli acquisti effettuati; egli non può pretendere di avere agito per conto di terzi.

Gli oggetti sono garantiti autentici senza condizioni e limite di tempo.

L'invio degli oggetti viene di regola effettuato a mezzo di plico raccomandato, a spese e rischio del destinatario il quale, se residente all'estero, assumerà a proprio carico ogni eventuale tassa o imposta prelevata in rapporto alla spedizione. È compito dell'acquirente di informarsi sulle prescrizioni doganali e valutarie del paese di importazione e la società organizzatrice della vendita all'asta non può essere ritenuta responsabile nel caso in cui esse non venissero rispettate.

Il commissario d'asta è autorizzato a modificare l'ordine di vendita figurante nel catalogo e ad associare più lotti; i lotti non saranno suddivisi. In caso di controversia le parti eleggono il foro giudiziario di Zurigo.

L'inoltro di un'offerta scritta o verbale implica l'accettazione senza riserve delle presenti condizioni d'asta.

Saranno inoltre applicabili le condizioni locali sulle vendite all'asta, il testo delle quali sarà disponibile nelle lingue tedesca, francese e inglese.

In caso di differenze di interpretazione farà fede il testo in lingua tedesca.

Conditions of sale

The following conditions are acknowledged by all persons participating in the Auction:

The estimates are in swiss francs. The opening bids will be about 80% of estimate, unless there are higher offers. Additional to the realized price are a 15% commission and 6,2% sales tax on silver and bronze coins and gold medals delivered in Switzerland. The total price is due after the final bid and payable on delivery.

Late payment of invoice will incur an interest at bank rate.

The hammer price is on the highest bid and the purchaser is responsible for payment. Written bids have preference over room bids. The buyer cannot claim to act on behalf of a third person.

The authenticity of the coins is unconditionally guaranteed, without time limit. All identifications of the items sold in this catalogue are statements of opinion and made in good faith.

The dispatching of purchases is normally registered and insured, payable by the purchaser. The purchaser is responsible for any dues or taxes outside of Switzerland and is advised to acquaint himself with the formalities. The Auctioneer cannot be responsible for contraventions.

The Auctioneer may change the sequence of the catalogue or unite lots; lots however cannot be divided.

The Auction is held in Zurich and any legal questions arising shall be determined in Zurich.

A buyer, consigning commissions or executing room bids, acknowledges the acceptance of the above conditions.

The usual conditions applied to Auction sales held in Zurich are here reiterated. The above mentioned conditions are written in German, French and English; the only legal valid text is German.

CELTIC COINAGE

East Celts

Boii

- 1 Stater, 2nd - 1st cent. B.C. (?), AV 8.48 g. Head of Athena Alkis r., wearing crested Corinthian helmet decorated with serpent. $\Delta\lambda\epsilon\epsilon\alpha\eta\alpha\pi\omicron$ [i.e., $\Delta\lambda\epsilon\epsilon\alpha\eta\alpha\pi\omicron(Y)$] r. to l. outwardly around winged Nike walking l., holding distaff-like object in r. hand and trident in l. R. Paulsen, Die Münzprägungen der Boier, 1974, cf. pl. 2, 26-27 (for obv.), 26 (for legend form) and 26 & 29 (for rev.)
Good very fine 5,000.-

The competent style of both obverse and reverse suggests the work of the die-engraver of Paulsen pl. 2, 26.

- 2 Stater, AV 6.79 g. Egg-shaped protuberance decorated at top with design resembling sun with five rays. Rev. Two crescent-shaped protuberances around a central depression; field concave. Cf. Paulsen, pl. 17, 367
Very fine 1,800.-

Belgica

Treveri

- 3 Stater, 1st cent. B.C., AV 6.21 g. Profile eye (vestigial Apollo head) r., three stars before; border of dots. Rev. Horse cantering l. over exergual line of wave and dots. Below, two concentric circles around pellet, and above, \checkmark in heart-shaped frame; (l.) and r., star. S. Scheers, La Gaule Belgique, 1983, p. 408 ff and pl. 8, 223
Extremely fine 2,200.-

Gaul

Parisii

- 4 Stater, late 2nd cent. B.C., AV 7.08 g. Youthful male head (Apollo) r., hair arranged in long strands ending in curls, three lunettes on brow, the lowest ending in a volute, and detached s-shaped lock of hair before face; (border of dots). Rev. Stylised horse prancing l.; below, circle of five pellets, beneath which, curved line resembling open wreath; above, curvilinear triangular formation containing square compartments, each enclosing pellet, intending perhaps the canopy of heaven; border of dots. J.-B. Colbert de Beaulieu, Les monnaies gauloises des Parisii, Paris 1970, Class. V, 35 and pl. 25 (these dies).

Vertical scratches on obverse and three die-breaks on reverse, otherwise very fine 3,000.-

The typology of the developed Celtic gold coinage, though limited in scope, abounds in symbolism of a solar nature, from the principal derivative types, Apollo-Helios and horse, to the common decorative details of sun, moon and stars. The Parisii, however, especially on the reverse where the Bellovacian representation of horse crowned by flying victory is transformed into something rich and strange, made of their staters works of art.

Gaul or Britain

Gallo-Belgic C (Ambiani)

- 5 Stater, early 1st cent. B.C., AV 6.49 g. Disintegrated head of Apollo r., wreathed. Rev. Partly-disintegrated horse r. over double exergual line enclosing chevron and dot pattern; above, crescent and pellet; below, pellet. Cf. Scheers pl. 4, 90 and 91, Mack 28 and 30, Van Arsdell 46 and Allen, "Origins ..." in Frere, Problems of the Iron Age in Southern Britain, 1960, passim.
Extremely fine 800.-

That a large proportion of the first gold coinage in use in Britain is of Ambianic origin is undisputed, yet there exist staters of the same general class which have a distinct rather delicate character, perhaps more British than Gaulish. To this "transmanche" category our coin belongs, either as one of the latest staters of the Ambiani or as an early imitation from south-east Britain, Kent-Sussex area.

GREEK COINAGE

Etruria

Populonia

- 6 25-asses, c. 211-206, AV 1.39 g. XXV l. to r. inwardly, beneath and behind stylised profile head of lion r., jaws agape and tongue protruding; border of dots. Rev. Faint striations upon a plain ground. I. Vecchi, The coinage of the Rasna, SNR 67, 1988, 47 Extremely fine 3,500.-

Illustrated on colour plate 1

Campania

Cales

- 7 Bronze, about 276-2609, AE 7.64 g. CALENO upwards before laureate head of Apollo l., long hair tumbling about neck, behind which eight-pointed star, border of dots. Rev. CALENO in exergue below man-faced bull, head to front, walking r.; above bull, eight-rayed star with an additional eight flames in the interstices, and below, Δ. Border of dots. Sambon 959 Wonderful lucent dark green patina. Superb 1,000.-

Illustrated on enlargement plate A

The river-god is perhaps Achelous, as probably at Naples; the Apollo evoked is emphatically Apollo-Helios. Heat and irrigation would be essential to this important vine-producing area, next to the celebrated Falernus ager.

Neapolis

- 8 Nomos, about 410-400, AR 7.47 g. Head of nymph Parthenope r. wearing bandeau, her loosely-waved hair caught up in a chignon. Rev. Man-faced bull, perhaps the river-god Achelous, father of Parthenope, walking r., head almost facing, crowned by Nike flying r.; below, double exergual line beneath which, (NE)OΠIOAITHE. N. Rutter, Campanian Coinages 475-380 B.C., 1979, 101 var. (obv. die 62, rev. die apparently unpublished, cf. 88-90)
Like the coins of Syracuse which they closely resemble in composition and style, the coins of Naples are hard to find really well struck and centred as this specimen is. Of remarkably sensitive style on both sides, prettily toned and in high relief. Extremely fine 3,500.-

- 9 Nomos, about 300, AR 7.70 g. Similar to previous, but bandeau with heavy central line and Parthenope wears circle-with-pellet and triple-pendant ear-ring, and dotted necklace; behind neck, facing figure of Artemis holding lighted torch in each hand, and beneath truncation, APTEMI. Rev. As previous, but N below bull and NEOΠIOAITΩN below single exergual line. Cf. SNG ANS 342 (Ω twice in ethnic) and Sambon 460a (citing border of dots, probably in error) Well-centred, about extremely fine 1,500.-

The little figure of Artemis, here shown in her function of protectress of childbirth, is a type parlant of this important monetary magistrate.

Calabria

Taras

- 10 Alexander, King of Molossia in Epirus 342-330, 1/12 stater, about 334-332, AV 0.69 g. Radiate and nimbate bust of Helios three-quarter l. Rev. AA above and EE below winged thunderbolt of archaising, lotiform type. O. Ravel, The Collection of Tarantine Coins formed by M.P. Vlasto, 1947, 1864-5 Good very fine 1,200.-

The appearance of Helios on this first Tarentine gold coin, soon afterwards issued with the city ethnic, suggests by its being struck in the name of Alexander that the obverse type, linked as it is with a reverse of a thunderbolt, presumably that of Dodonaean Zeus, also represents a particular cult of Alexander's, which will relate to the nomos, Vlasto 602, our no. 18, on which a sunburst is sometimes shown on the horse's hindquarters, and the two star issues, our no. 17, as well as to the Poseidon-Taras gold stater.

- 11 Nomos, about 334-332, AR 7.77 g. Ephebos, naked but for helmet and carrying long spear and large round shield in l. hand, head r., standing to front behind bridled horse r. which he prepares to mount, his r. hand resting on his steed's back; in field r., Γ . Rev. Naked Taras, with trident upright in r. hand and small round shield in l., seated sideways on dolphin going l., waves below; TAP(AΣ) in field upper r. and A beneath dolphin. Vlasto 518 (these dies)
Obverse slightly off-centre, otherwise an elegant coin in high relief. Rare and good very fine 1,000.-
- 12 Nomos, about 334-332, AR 7.79 g. Naked ephebos seated on standing horse, which he crowns, r.; beneath horse, another naked youth kneels r. on exergual line and examines the near fore hoof; in field r., Φ . Rev. Precisely as previous coin, but Γ beneath dolphin. Vlasto 572 (these dies).
A lovely obverse composition and rare. A few scratches in obverse field, otherwise unusually well struck and very fine. 1,400.-
- 13 Nomos, about 334-332, AR 8.07 g. Ephebos, naked but for helmet and belt (or folded chlamys) around waist and seen from behind, carrying forward-pointing spear and large round shield as he rides prancing horse r.; below, Γ seemingly recut in part from Φ . Rev. Shock-haired naked Taras seated sideways, ankles crossed, on dolphin going l., and holding in extended r. hand sacrificial jug of olpe type; beneath dolphin, Π and waves, and in field r., TAPAE downwards, sgraffito Δ beneath second A. Vlasto 448 var. Rare, an ambitious obverse type exceptionally well preserved, and perhaps a new variety
Extremely fine 800.-
- 14 Nomos, about 334-332, AR 7.71 g. Naked ephebos, r. knee bent and spear and small round shield in l. hand, hurling himself from horse cantering r.; beneath, Δ . Rev. TAPA-Σ downwards in field r. Shock-haired naked Taras, trident over r. shoulder, riding dolphin r. over waves; beneath dolphin, K. Vlasto 442 (these dies)
Obverse slightly grazed, but the reverse is a perfect gem of this attractive issue. Extremely fine 1,500.-
- 15 Nomos, about 334-332, AR 7.79 g. Naked ephebos, crowned by Nike flying l., riding trotting horse l. and leading another beside it in background, over undulating exergual line suggesting rough ground; in field upper l., K, and beneath horses, Φ I; linear border. Rev. TAPAE upwards in field l. Naked Taras seated sideways, body to front, on dolphin going l.; he turns backwards to strike with trident held in r. hand spined fish swimming below r. over waves; in field r., K; linear border. Vlasto 402 (these dies) Jenkins, Essays Thompson, 1979, pp. 111 ff.
Well struck and almost perfectly centred on a large flan, an outstanding example of this very rare and beautiful coin.
Extremely fine 7,000.-
- Illustrated on colour plate 1 and enlargement plate A
Sentimental attachment to the belief that the initials Φ I and K, as elsewhere in the period KAA and A(P), represent master die-cutters in the light of other ambitious types by probably the same engraver(s), as for example Vlasto 519 (and 529, our no. 16) bearing other or additional initials must be discarded, even if the appearance of A alone on the reverse of VI. 399, in an identical style and on a nomos from the same obverse die as our specimen, were not in itself convincing. Regrettably, the letter groups Φ I, KAA, API etc., so often interpreted as artists' signatures will be those of functionaries of the Italiote League, and in some form are found everywhere in South Italy at this period of war under the guidance of Alexander of Epirus, and with a sigh we must say with Jenkins as he produces yet more evidence to destroy the aesthetic theory, "I think all the names are of officials."
- 16 Nomos, about 334-332, AR 7.86 g. Naked ephebos, crowned by Nike flying r., riding r. prancing horse restrained by a second ephebos standing at the horse's near side; below, I and uncertain symbol (or impressive die-flaw); border of dots. Rev. Similar to no. 13, but Taras rides astride, TAPAE instead of Π and waves under dolphin, and K and pecten l. and r. in field. Vlasto 529 (this obv. die)
Metal flaw on reverse low l., otherwise a beautifully struck specimen of this rare and attractive coin.
Extremely fine 2,500.-

Illustrated on colour plate 1

Our nos. 11-16 quite clearly form with other nomoi, as for instance VI. 519-23 and 525, a small, rare and unified group characterised by (a) monumental composition and refined treatment, (b) frequent presence of enclosing borders and employment of waves under Taras, (c) direction by a small group of monetary magistrates signing principally as K, KAA, A(P), Γ and Φ I, or API over KAA, cited in Metapontum III, p. 53, and (d) use of perhaps only one or two engravers throughout; nos. 11-16 have, for example, the same head on all the horses throughout, and muscular Taras' hair is always rough and abundant, 13 and 14 in this aspect, though signed Π and K respectively, being practically identical. Hoard evidence puts them squarely into the period of Alexander at Taras; they are, it may be, his own triumphal issue. Jenkins', op. cit., new dating of Evans Period IV to 330-320/15 must therefore be reconsidered, the more so in that he fails to note how very rare coins in Alexander's own name or of Epirote type are in the hoard record, I.G.C.H. 1973, 1925-1931, while exaggerating the slowness of the arrival of pegasi for overstriking. A preferable arrangement might put Evans III N, IV B-L and most of VA into one coinage (VA making in general a mass issue of no particular merit) of c. 334-300 and somewhat later, and has the virtues of providing a real occasion for coining in quantity, keeping the monetary magistrates in a rational group, restoring the "Molossian" eagle, and taking away the Poseidon-Taras star gold stater (Jenkins pl. 10, 13, 19) from both Archidamus and the little-known piping time of relative peace, 320-315, to put it where it should reasonably belong; Evans VB 1-9 would follow on to C. 320, as recent find material seems to indicate.

- 17 Nomos, about 334-332, AR 7.89 g. Naked ephebos riding cantering horse r.; on his l. shoulder, large round shield and at waist, two long spears held transversally; he strikes downward with spear in r. hand. In field l., Γ , and r., Λ ; below horse, $\overset{K}{\underset{\Delta}{A}}\Lambda$; border of dots. Rev. Naked Taras seated r. on dolphin between eight-rayed stars, examining Attico-Phrygian helmet supported by l. hand; in field l., $\Gamma\Lambda\Phi\Lambda$ upwards and beneath dolphin, $\Phi\Lambda$. Vlasto 538 (misread) – 541

Rare. Weakly struck, otherwise extremely fine 2,500.–

This extensive coinage (VI. 538-554, with sub-group without stars, VI. 555-558) is clearly related to the "triumphal" coinage, VI. 530-4, 535-7 and 560-2, $\Phi\Lambda$ falling out, $\overset{K}{\underset{\Delta}{A}}\Lambda$ continuing, and might represent payment for the Lucanian wars; the stars will allude to Alexander of Epirus.

- 18 Nomos, about 334-332 and later, AR 7.85 g. As previous, but $\Sigma\Lambda$ under horse, which bears an eight-rayed star (sunburst) on its hindquarters. Naked Taras seated on dolphin l., head bowed, holding in extended r. hand two-handled drinking vessel (cantharus) and in l., trident with volute ornaments; in field l.; \mathcal{R} and r., $\Gamma\Lambda\Phi\Lambda$ downwards; beneath dolphin, smaller dolphin swimming l. Vlasto 602 (these dies)
A rare variety. Delicate "new" or "Lysippan" style, a very bright, fresh strike. Good extremely fine 1,200.–

The sunburst symbol of Alexander of Epirus is used here as at Phrae in Thessaly two decades before by Alexander tyrant of the city, who puts his badge, the labrys, as would-be tagos of Thessaly, on his horse on the stater, BMC 14 and Gulbenkian II, 482. Thessaly, Macedon and Epirus were in politics and family alliances constantly interlinked. This issue is joined to other Alexander of Epirus issues at Taras by magistrates' initials and symbols of marine significance: this coin, $\Sigma\Lambda$ / $\Lambda\Phi$ dolphin, to Vlasto 588, $\Sigma\Lambda$ / $\Phi\Lambda$ waves, to VI. 507 $\Sigma\Lambda$ / prow and pellet. The reverential pose of Taras on the reverse is the same as Heracles' on the Croton nomos, our no. 44.

- 19 Nomos, about 331 and later, AR 7.95 g. Ephebos, naked but for helmet and bearing small shield in l. hand, about to leap, r. knee bent, from horse cantering l.; above in field r., EY and below horse, $(N)IKOTT(\Lambda\Sigma)$. Rev. Naked Taras astride dolphin r. leaning back preparing to thrust with javelin in r. hand, trident in r. over l. shoulder; $\Gamma\Lambda\Phi\Lambda$ in upper r. field and hippocamp r. beneath dolphin. Vlasto -- cf. 700 (obv.) and 698 (rev.)
Perhaps an unpublished variety of this rare and interesting issue. Die-flaw on obverse. Extremely fine 1,200.–

This very idiosyncratic reverse more closely suits the canons of the so-called Lysippan style, new and slender proportions in the figures, greater precision of detail and the representation of momentary appearance (T.B.L.W. in the Oxford Classical Dictionary) than those types commonly attributed to the master's influence; it may be merely coincidental that this mannerist treatment is found also in the same issue on dies engraved ΛY (Vlasto 699), though the signature should be seen as that perhaps of an honorary monetary magistrate rather than that of a die-engraver. The magistrate ΞOP (VI. 700), also signing this issue, reappears on the "triumphal" nomos, Vlasto 680, as does $\overset{K}{\underset{\Delta}{A}}\Lambda$, VI. 530, with reverse in "Lysippan" style.

Lucania

Heraclea

- 20 Nomos, about 334-332/1, AR 7.41 g. Head of Athena r., hair escaping in loose waves from under neck-piece and visor, wearing crested Attic helmet decorated with Scylla hurling stone, and circle and pellet and triple-pendant ear-ring; in field upper r., $\Delta(K\Phi)$; border of dots. Rev. $I - H$ (PAKAHIQN) upper r., downwards. Naked youthful Heracles standing to front, head and upper torso turned to r., strangling the Nemean lion. In field l., $\overset{K}{\underset{\Delta}{A}}\Lambda$ upwards and club, and beneath, owl facing. SNG ANS 63 (these dies) E. Work, NNM 91, 38 f
Rare. A splendid and rich late classical treatment of both obverse and reverse. Toned, extremely fine 6,000.–

$\overset{K}{\underset{\Delta}{A}}\Lambda$ establishes this issue, medallic like so many of his coinages, as of Alexander of Epirus, who maintained the seat of government of the Italiote League at this Tarentine foundation till the winter of 332/331. $\overset{K}{\underset{\Delta}{A}}\Lambda$ is very active signing dies at Taras 334-332.

Laos

- 21 Nomos, about 500, AR 7.92 g. $\Lambda(\text{A} \text{ P} \text{ S})$ almost worn from the die. Bearded man-headed bull standing r. on base composed of pellets between two lines; his head, the brow fringed with dots as curls, is diademed and horned and reverted so as to nuzzle the withers. Border of dots between two linear concentric circles. Rev. As obverse, but incuse l.; there is no horn and the hair, tied up at the neck, is more clearly visible. In field above, $(\text{M}) \diamond (\text{M})$ in relief, retrograde. Plain base and wreath or herring-bone border. SNG ANS 132 Gorini 4 (this obv. die)
Very rare and unusually good. Good very fine 9,000.-

Obverse and reverse legends taken together compose the ethnic adjective Lavinios, "of Laos", a river-port colony of Sybaris, to which the remaining inhabitants of the mother-city would have fled after the destruction of Sybaris by its neighbours in 510. The thick, late incuse fabric of this exiguous coinage seems to support this view, as does the type, the Sybaritic bull converted into conventional river-god type to represent the river Laos.

Metapontum

- 22 Nomos of thick fabric, about 500, AR 8.07 g. Six-grained ear of barley; in field l., META upwards; border of dots between two linear circles. Rev. A similar type incuse, but with five grains only and no inscription; striated border. P. Noe, The Coinage of Metapontum, ANSNNM 32 and 47, Additions and Corrections by A. Johnston, 255 SNG ANS 256 (this obv. die) About extremely fine 800.-

- 23 Nomos, about 340, AR 7.80 g. Head of female divinity (Demeter) r., wearing single-pendant ear-ring and dotted necklace, the loosely waved hair caught up in a sphendone; behind neck, KPI. Border of dots. Rev. Seven-grained ear of barley with leaf on stalk to l.; in field r., METAPIO upwards. Noe 499 (these dies)
Very rare. Excellent style and fine dark excavation patina. Unusually large flan, extremely fine 6,500.-

- 24 Nomos, about 340, AR 7.84 g. Head of youthful Demeter l., as previous but without sphendone, truncation of neck deeply curved; border of dots. Rev. Seven-grained ear of barley with leaf to r.; in field l. on raised panel, META downwards, and r., $\text{P} \text{H} \text{P}$ upwards. Noe 527 (these dies) Rare. Reverse off-centre, good very fine 1,500.-

- 25 Italo-Achaean $\frac{1}{3}$ -stater, about 333-331, AV 2.60 g. Head of Hera r., her hair loosely waved and falling down her neck, wearing stephane decorated with palmettes. Rev. Six-grained ear of barley with curved leaf to r. on which sits bird (eagle ?) with folded wings to r.; in field l.; METAION upwards. SNG ANS 395 Ann Johnston, The Coinage of Metapontum part 3, ANS NNM 164, GI (this obv. die) Very rare and very fine 2,500.-

The sparse gold issues of Metapontum, as elsewhere in Magna Graecia, are all to be associated with military campaigns conducted by foreign adventurer-saviours, Alexander, cleonymus, Pyrrhus. This first issue, typologically and stylistically, seems clearly to belong to the time of Alexander of Epirus and his reconstituted Italiote League of which Metapontum was a member, Metapontum with which he had a treaty, where his army was sometimes based, and which finally despatched his body home. The Hera head will be related to the facing head type in general use in the region.

- 26 Nomos, about 331/330 or later, AR 7.79 g. Head of youthful Demeter l., hair in loose waves, wearing wreath of two barley-ears and two leaves, pellet and single-pendant ear-ring and dotted necklace; border of dots. Rev. Seven-grained ear of barley with furled leaf to r.; in field l., large caduceus beside which, low r., AY, and r. META upwards. Johnston, Metapontum III, Class. A, 1.5 (these dies, but rev. die-break as 1.6) Gulbenkian I 5.79 (this rev. die)
Struck in high relief on broad flan. Some weakness at highest points of obverse, otherwise F.d.c. 3,000.-

Johnston, op. cit. pp. 8 f., appropriately finds this beautiful coin hard to classify, given the exceptional iconography and high relief of the obverse and the "unique ... disposition of the elements of the reverse type". The slenderness and lightness of Demeter, the meticulous observation of the details of the barley-ear, the boldness of the cutting of the ethnic, tempt one to link this issue with AY-signed dies at Taras (VI. 699) and once again see a faintly possible instance of Lysippus's working as engraver and magistrate.

- 27 Nomos, about 333-330, AR 7.82 g. Bearded head of Leucippus oekistes r., wearing Corinthian helmet; behind neck, bunch of grapes. Rev. Eight-grained ear of barley, leaf to r.; in field l., upwards, META. Johnston Class A, 4.5 (these dies)
Rather close flan, but as struck. Extremely fine 1,000.-

The helmeted head of Leucippus, mythical hero-founder of Metapontum, is appropriate to the wars against the Lucani and Bruttians who coveted the riches derived from the hard to defend agricultural possessions of the city; this is another issue arising from the presence of Alexander and his protecting army.

- 28 Nomos, about 333-331, AR 7.86 g. Head of youthful Heracles r. with side-whiskers and hair arranged in S-curly over brow, wearing lion's skin over scalp and neck, paws knotted under chin. Rev. Six-grained ear of barley with furled leaf to l.; in field l., upwards, Π-PO and r., META downwards. Johnston Class A, 6.1 (these dies)
Perhaps overstruck (on a Corinthian stater?), very few specimens known, a coin of great historical and artistic interest.
Large, bright flan, nearly extremely fine 6,000.-

The magistrate ΠΡΟ is found signing parallel issues, Johnston A, 7.1-9 and 7.10-12, with Demeter in styles ranging from the mediocre to the sublime. The appearance of Heracles on the coinage after a gap of perhaps fifty years is to be explained by his forming part of a group of patron-divinities, Leucippus, Tharragoras, Athena, new representations of Demeter and of course Zeus Eleutherios, invoked for the protection of the city against the attacks of the Italic tribes; all but one of these types are rare, sometimes, as in this case, extremely so, and of a medallion character which links them with the gold types 1 and 2, and with certain issues of Taras (see our nos. 10-18), all to be associated with Alexander the Molossian. The obverse is modelled on the coinage of Alexander the Great and might be taken as a compliment to his Epirote uncle.

- 29 Nomos, about 334/333-331, AR 7.80 g. Helmeted head of Leucippus r. as on no. 27, but of greatly superior style, and in field r. ΑΕΥΚΙΠΠΙΟΣ downwards, and l., parazonium; below truncation, K. Rev. Seven-grained ear of barley with furled leaf, on which stands calyx crater, to r.; in field l., META upwards, below which r., (ONA). Johnston Class A, 6.10 (these dies)
This is the most accomplished representation of the Leucippus head. Very delicate work in high relief and a very rare variety.
Toned, extremely fine 2,000.-

Illustrated on colour plate 1

The initials ONA and K are found at Tarentum and other regional mints at this period, cf. for the latter our nos. 15 and 16, for example, and are undoubtedly names of federal officials, "perhaps magistrates of the Italiote League", says Johnston, "charged with organising preparations for Alexander's expedition".

- 30 Nomos, about 333-331, AR 7.80 g. Youthful head of Demeter l. with plump features, wearing pellet-within-circle and triple-pendant ear-ring and dotted necklace; her hair is elegantly disordered in loose waves tumbling down her neck over both shoulders and bears a barley-wreath of four ears and four leaves. In field l., ΔΑΜΑΤΗΡ upwards with, below, cross-torch and r., K. Rev. Seven-grained ear of barley with furled leaf to l.; beneath leaf, upwards, ΑΡΧΙΠ, and above, crab; in field r., META upwards. Johnston Class A, 6.12 (these dies)
A wonderful example of early hellenistic art, perfectly struck and centred, excessively rare and the best of the perhaps three recorded specimens. Prettily toned on a full flan. Small metal flaw in reverse field, otherwise
extremely fine 3,000.-

For K, see note on previous coin, and for ΑΡΧΙΠ, Johnston p. 53. This most rare piece belongs to the same group as our no. 26 and appears to be the work of that engraver. It provides a common model for subsequent Demeter heads, cf. AMB 148, and might itself be derived, to combine two observations of Johnston's, from the same statue that inspired the nomos signed Aristoxenos, Noe II, 439.

- 31 Dinomos, about 333-331, AR 16.01 g. Helmeted head of Leucippus r. as on nos. 27 and 29, but in field l. forepart of lion r. and ΑΠΗ, and on bowl of helmet, winged Nike driving quadriga r., hippocamp r. beneath. Rev. Seven-grained ear of barley with furled leaf to l.; in field l., club upright above, and ΑΜΙ below, leaf and r., (ΜΕ)ΤΑΠΟΝΤΙΝΩΝ upwards. Johnston Class B, 1.2 (this obv. die)
Rare. Areas of weakness on obverse and two striking cracks, but about as struck. Extremely fine 4,000.-

The exceptional issue of dinomoi at Metapontum was occasioned by the Alexander war, Johnson, p. 57.

- 32 Nomos, about 331/330-320, AR 7.86 g. Head of Demeter r. wearing pellet and triple-pendant ear-ring and dotted necklace, hair formally arranged in heavy curls at brow and restrained by massive wreath of three ears of barley and four leaves, while flowing abundantly down neck over shoulder; border of dots. Rev. Seven-grained ear of barley with furled leaf, above which, star; in field l., META upwards with below, AY. Johnston Class C, 8.6 (these dies)
Well struck in high relief in a rather theatrical style. Extremely fine 1,600.-

One is reluctant to place this coin very much beyond the late Alexander period with which the Taras star coinage seems to be associated, given also the excellent technical standard of at least some of the sub-class, a doubt perhaps shared by Johnston, p. 15, in discussing its anomalous nature. Hoards though indicate a date of c. 320.

Poseidonia

- 33 Italo-Achaean nomos of thick fabric, about 400, AR 7.86 g. Poseidon, naked but for chlamys spread across shoulders, extending l. arm and striking horizontally with trident in r.; before him ΠΟΜΕΣΑ retrograde, downwards. Dotted exergual line and border of degenerate archaic type, dots between two linear concentric circles. Rev. ΠΟΜΕΣΑΑ retrograde above bull walking l. on double exergual line, the upper line composed of dots. Cf. SNG ANS 655 & 663
Very sharply struck from new dies. About extremely fine 1,500.-

Poseidonia-Paestum

- 34 Semis, 1st cent. B.C. - 1st cent. A.D., AE 4.29 g. Scales, with corn-ear in l. pan and weight (or coin) in r.; above, Q LAVR (ligate) PR; below PAE (ligate). Rev. Scene of coining: one workman wearing tunic holds r. uncertain object (stack of blanks?) towards anvil over which another workman, similarly clad, raises r. hand as though to strike (with hammer?); a little above anvil, pellet (coin?). Above, SPDDSS and to l., downwards, MIL; in exergue, S. M. Crawford, Paestum and Rome, The Form and Function of a Subsidiary Coinage, IIN Supplemento al volume 18-19 degli "Annali", 25/1 SNG Cop. 1372 Garrucci pl. 123, 5-6
Very rare, a famous little coin. Black patina, a well-struck extremely fine / very fine 600.-

Crawford, who aptly describes the late coinage of Paestum as frivolous and chaotic (a pretty good description of social and political life in the provinces during the early imperial period, for which see the graffiti of Pompeii and Apuleius' Golden Ass), interprets the inscriptions as Q. Laur(entius) ? praetor sua pecunia dono dedit Senatus sententia milia (or miliens): "The praetor Q. Laur. out of his own money and by consent of the Senate (of Paestum) gave as a present (to his fellow-citizens) thousands (of this coin)". To what end is suggested by the obverse; to buy a measure of subsidised wheat.

Sybaris

- 35 Italo-Achaean 1/3-stater, about 520, AR 2.64 g. Bull standing l., head reverted over shoulder; below, triple exergual base of pellets between plain lines; VM retrograde. Cable and pellet border. Rev. Same type incuse, but the bull's rump noticeably raised; exergual line and border of ladder type. SNG ANS 847
Very rare in this quality. Very slightly double-struck, otherwise F.d.c. 2,800.-

Thurium

- 36 Nomos, about 400, AR 7.94 g. Head of Athena r. wearing crested and olive-wreathed Attic helmet from which hair escapes in formal curls at brow and neck; between crest and neck-piece, A. Rev. Bull advancing slowly r., head lowered, about to charge, A on rump; above, ΦΟΥΡΙΩΝ and in exergue, tunny-fish r. Cf. ANS 900 (for rev.) and 876 (for obv., but A in field r.) BMC --
From one of the best obverse dies in this class, a seemingly unpublished variety. Superb severe classical style, nearly extremely fine 1,300.-

The letters which appear sporadically within the large and homogeneous group from which this nomos comes form an alphabetical sequence.

- 37 Dinomos, about 350, AR 16.01 g. As previous, but helmet decorated with Scylla raising l. hand, and Δ between crest and neck-piece. Rev. ΦΟΥΡΙΩΝ As previous, but bull is charging; no letters; tunny-fish r. in exergue. S. Noe, The Thurian Di-staters, NNM 71, F 20
Sensitive late classical style. Large flan, good very fine 3,600.-

Velia

- 38 Nomos, 380-360, AR 7.54 g. Lion at bay r., roaring, on dotted exergual line beneath which, owl with folded wings; border of dots. Rev. Head of nymph r., elaborately waved hair in sphendone, wearing single-pendant ear-ring and linear necklace with jewel at throat; in field above, YEAH; before face, vine-branch with tendril, grapes and leaf formally arranged; beneath chin, Φ. SNG Oxford 1094 (these dies) AMB 115 (these dies = Mangieri 57)
Very fine 2,000.-

Mangieri, Velia ... 1984, by failing to perceive the extraordinary delight the Velians took in prolonging on their coinage archaic and later art far beyond its natural term, has made a chaotic rearrangement of the almost perfectly coherent classification by C.M. Kraay of the Robinson material in SNG Oxford, 1969. The obverse of our coin, Mangieri 57 (dated 440-390) die links with Mangieri 23 (dated 490-440), and it is inexplicable how Mangieri divided 24-29 and 54-55 since it is obvious that 57 precedes 24-29. Kraay's Period II could be restated in Mangieri's numbers as: 21-56-22-23-57 (die-linked to 23)-58. Mangieri also failed to notice that his no. 58 should be lion obverse and nymph head reverse, the very coin that closes the series with lion obverse and is followed by the lion reverse series 24-25-26-54-55 (all with ΨΕΑΗΤΕΩΝ) which is itself followed by the Athena head / lion series 27-28-29. Velia copies Syracuse heads of c. 480 from about 400-380/70, in 380/70 Thurium classical Athena heads, then Thurium late classical (including dinomoi) from 360. The reverse of our coin seems to have Terina affiliations of c. 400, cf. H & J. 66 (with added jewellery). N.B. The illustration of this coin has gone to print with the obverse and reverse inverted.

Bruttium

Caulonia

- 39 Nomos, about 525, AR 7.81 g. Naked figure of diademed Apollo as kouros daphnephoros advancing r. on linear base, raising over shoulder in r. hand laurel-branch and having on extended l. arm a small naked male figure running r., head reverted, laurel-branch held backwards in r. hand; in field r., also on linear base, stag standing r., looking back, and l., KAY upwards. Cable and pellet border. Rev. The same type incuse l., but without ethnic; toothed border. S. Noe, The Coinage of Caulonia, 1958, -- but cf. 20, 21 (where bases dotted) and 24 ANS 151 (these dies, obv. probably not N. 23 as stated)
A very attractive example of this well-known archaic masterpiece. Nearly extremely fine 9,000.-

For a full discussion of this supposedly enigmatic type, see LIMC II (I), 1984, p. 235, as also Kunstfreund, 1974, p. 72 and AMB p. 60, 190. Were it not for the little running daimon, the type would be a common representation, archaically handled, of Apollo as purifier and huntsman-protector, cf. LIMC II (I), p. 295, 931 (Iekythos c. 410).

Croton

- 40 Nomos, about 520, AR 7.30 g. ϠϠ in field l., upwards. SNG Oxford 1517 (these dies)
Large flan, practically as struck. Die-break on rev., good very fine 1,200.-

This very substantial issue, commonly struck on large flans suggesting pegasi hammered flat and restruck, and of a mass-production character which greatly contrasts with preceding coinages with Akragas-imitating types, might be regarded, and the hoard evidence confirms the dating (see Johnston, Metapontum III pp. 28f), as Croton's response to Archidamus's presence in Magna Graecia.

- 44 Nomos, about 332, AR 8.06 g. Head of Hera Lacinia facing three-quarter r. wearing dotted necklace with pendants and, over luxuriant loosely-waved hair, diadem decorated with palmette flanked by foreparts of griffins, both facing r.; in field r., downwards, K - P - O - T and low l., O. Border of dots. Rev. Linear border. SNG ANS 379 (these dies) A very rare variety in wonderful quality, exceptionally well centred and struck in high relief. Toned, about extremely fine 11,500.-

The Hera Lacinia nomoi of Croton seem to belong to three classes: ANS 371-7 (fine late classical style, analogous to Greek mainland facing head productions of c. 360-350, cf. Lorber, Amphipolis, 1990, pls. 2, 3 and 5); ANS 378, 379 (this coin; fine early hellenistic style); and ANS. 380-383 (similar to previous, but noticeably inferior in design and execution). The first, it is proposed, should go to the time of the Brutian wars and the expedition of Archidamus of Sparta, 344-338, the second and third to the wars of Alexander of Epirus, 334-331, the last being an extensive and degenerate continuation of the second. Recent hoard evidence, for Croton in the 4th cent. hitherto almost worthless, associates the second two classes, V.F. - F.D.C. with Evans period IV and early V, i.e., from c. 335 to c. 320. The posture of calm veneration expressed by Heracles is that of Taras on our no. 18. These are the finest dies of the four pairs known for the class and superior to the same types as employed at Hyria, Thurium and Fensieris.

- 45 Nomos, about 332-300, AR 7.52 g. Head of Apollo r., hair dressed in loose waves falling to shoulders, wearing laurel-wreath; in field r., downwards, KPOTΩNIA and r., upwards TAΣ. Border of dots. Rev. Infant Heracles seated three-quarter r. on cushion, head l., turning to strangle with both hands two snakes that twine round and attack him; around his neck and upper torso, cord. SNG Oxford 1525 (this rev. die)

An outstanding example of this very rare, attractive and unusual coin. Extremely fine 7,000.-

The reverse type depicts the attempt of Hera, jealous of Zeus' love for Alcmene, to dispose of the fruit of their passion by sending snakes to kill baby Heracles in his cradle. The infantine hero of course stifled them and the myth later served as numismatic shorthand, or so it has been believed, for symmarchy, a league against perceived enemies, first on a stater of Thebes, c. 430, Hirmer pl. 145, 454, then on issues of the Ionian-Carian Confederacy from 382, as Zacynthus c. 350, H. pl. 159, 509 and finally on this issue of Croton, which stands between the last Hera Lacinia coinages (for reverse) and the new Apollo/tripod issues, SNG ANS 389-404 (for obverse). It again belongs to the medallic types of the Alexander period and stresses Heracles as both city-founder and emblem of the Italiote League. The "reverse" is so struck as to appear effectively the more important side of the coin and is related to sculptural models, LIMC 4, 2, pls. 554-555.

Rare, of sublime late classical style, and in astonishingly high relief, good extremely fine 10,000.-

Illustrated on colour plate 1 and enlargement plate A

The sheer beauty of this ravishing coin is misleading, for far from being of the best period, it is the last flowering of this curious and misunderstood little mint, whose stater issues are as much medallic as commercial. Terina strikes always in tightly die-linked blocks, with often decades or more between issues of nomoi. H. & J.'s group D for example, must end not later than 380, after which there is nothing for twenty years or more, when Group E (first part, 82-83) produces obverses resembling Larissa heads of c. 370-360, presumably at the end of the period. Our coin corresponds to Metapontum III Class A (its companion piece, H. & J. 85, might be from the same hand as Johnston A. 6.12, our no. 30) and is therefore of the time of Alexander of Epirus, who was at Terina c. 332/1 (not, pace Holloway, in 330, after his death); the jewellery of the nymph belongs to this period, and the modelling of the hair, nose and lips is precisely that on the Zeus Dodonaeus head on the Alexander silver "Tarentine" stater, Vlasto 1868. The last true nomoi of Terina, H. & T. 94 & 95, are dreadful and correspond to Metapontum III Class C (later) & Taras VI. As with the Croton nomos, no. 45, the coin is so designed, with flat fields and high relief, as to give great prominence to the Nike type, which may well have been intended to be the real obverse.

Cammarata, La zecca Ennese, Ennarotary 1987, pl. 3, M (monete dei Mercenari di Ameselon) Extremely rare. Dark green patina, extremely fine 1,500.-

This attractive little coin, attributed on the basis of find-spots and style to the community of mercenaries established at the hillside town of Ameselon near Henna, belongs to the troubled times of the collapse of the empire of Dionysius II and the successive liberations of Dion and Timoleon. The types are appropriate: Hermes for good fortune and riches and Pegasus, like Medusa a very ancient daimon and apotropaic symbol, for protection against evil.

Catana

A masterwork of the celebrated engraver of decadrachms Euainetos, his signature being perfectly visible, a coin on both sides of the highest and most accomplished classical style. Dark grey tone, extremely fine 45,000.-

Illustrated on colour plate 1 and enlargement plate B

Euainetos here makes a bold and successful attempt at perspective and receding planes, always a problem for artists in antiquity. Horses, chariot and driver are shown three-quarter l., that is, having just turned the meta, they are about to confront the spectator head on; Nike, for her part, while flying r. is turning her upper torso to indicate that she will follow the quadriga. The meaning of the bell before Apollo's face is illuminated by a fifth century scaraboid gem in Boston, Boardman GGFR pl. 599 and LIMC II, 2, pl. 712, 75 on which a statue of Athena is shown to front with two three-beaded cords ending in bells hanging from her spear and shield, a bucranium beside her indicating a moment of sacrifice; wind and string instruments regularly accompanied acts of worship.

Mildenberg, Proceedings 8th Con. 1973, pl. 11, 22
Very rare, the obverse of great beauty and interest, complete though weakly struck, the reverse in high relief; four striking-cracks and good dark tone.
Good very fine. 15,000.-

This fine obverse is combined with three other reverses, all imitating Syracuse with great panache, including a facing head after Kimon; our coin, the last of the series, employs the only obverse die with a reverse die used a short time previously to strike didrachms, Rizzo pl. 42, 11, itself modelled on the Apollo head of the tetradrachm of Catana, Rizzo pl. 11, 14, our no. 51. Mildenberg, op. cit., suggests that the occasion for this exceptional coinage would be a demonstration of political independence on the part of a city half-way between Greeks and Carthaginians, at the time of Dionysius I's peace treaty with Carthage in 404.

Rare; large flan and sound metal. Very fine 4,500.-

This is the first engraver-signed tetradrachm issue and the only one signed by Sosion, coined with two obverse dies and one reverse die. The obverse style is still somewhat stiff, but well expresses what Sosion intended, a scene of sporting victory as Nike rewards the Syracusan driver as he slows his team after passing the winning post. The reverse, a plump and handsome Arethusa, shows, with its meticulous attention to detail and individuality what was already evident in the later unsigned issues and becomes more so as we move towards Kimon, that, subject only to the conformity imposed by the canons of classical art, each general class of Arethusa head in this period is the portrait of a once-living girl.

Rather close flan, but metal surfaces generally sound, an honest specimen. Good very fine 18,000.-

This enormously influential Persephone head, conceived and developed by Euainetos as a modest adaptation of Arethusa so as not to shock convention, and copied prodigiously in the fourth century, especially on the Agathoclean and Siculo-Punic coinages, should perhaps be associated with the politics of Dionysius I. Three types of Persephone heads, Tudeer 46, 47 and 66, appear for the first time, experimentally, at the time of his first Carthaginian War, 406-404, at a period when only Athena, once, was able to dislodge Arethusa from the coinage, Tudeer 58. After seven years of preparation, his second war against Carthage was initiated in 397 and ultimately successfully concluded in 392/390, leaving Dionysius master of most of the island, "archon of Sicily". The mass employment of Persephone coins - and decadrachms of Euainetos type were certainly coined in large quantities - would serve to identify the goddess, who is, of course, the Punic Tanit, with the Syracusan cause and remove her power from the enemy, of whom she was the principal divinity. If the parallels will hold, it should be noted that in 396 the Romans practised evocatio and "called out" Juno Regina from Veii, which then fell to their arms, Livy 5, 21 ff, and above all, should the Servian gloss on Aeneid 12. 841 be reliable, "evoked" "Juno", that is, Tanit again as Juno Caelestis, from Carthage in the fateful year 146.

The style and treatment of the Arethusa head are unparalleled at this period. If one were able to take the saccos or sphendone off, say, the tetradrachm, Rizzo pl. 48,12, one would see, perhaps, such a late Victorian hairstyle. The ear-ring type is also exceptional. There was clearly though a certain freedom allowed on small denominations, as witness the hemidrachm signed ΚΙΜ(ΟΝ), Rizzo pl. 48, 19, AMB 484, which depicts Arethusa as a water-nymph in a wholly unexpected way; Jameson, however, dates our coin to C. 330 and G.F. Hill in SNG Lloyd, to the time of Timoleon.

The Cefalù find IGCH 2154 of coins of this issue (30 in the hoard) seems to indicate four stages of coinage, of which our coin would represent the second, in a new, soft, smiling "victory" style of great technical accomplishment, followed after a brief head l. experiment by a mass (presumably for emergency payment in bulk) of so-called African copies, none of which is found in Africa, SNG Lloyd (with additions) 1493, 1488-1492, 1494 and 1495-1500. Since Agathocles had prosecuted his unsuccessful siege of Carthage probably with Egyptian money, this issue has as much to do with (a) the size of the Carthaginian subvention paid to him to make him go away as (b) with his profitable Sicilian campaigns, which established his power unshakeably in the island till 289, as the continued rev. presence of a triskeles indicates. A terminus post quem non is provided by his assuming the title of king in 304, but the removal of the ethnic ΣΥΡΑΚΟΣΙΩΝ could go back to anywhere between 310 and 307. The large number of Kore/quadrige tetradrachms may suggest the latter. For the first stage of this coinage, see also Giesecke, Sicilia Numismatica, 1923, pl. 21, 1 (ΣΥΡΑΚΟΣΙΩΝ as well as ΚΟΡΑΣ on obverse).

Hicetas, 287-278

- 82 Attic tridrachm, about 285, AR 12.66 g. Type as previous, but to l., and in field r., bee; border of dots. Rev. Quadriga cantering l., precisely as no. 79, but chariot driver is winged Nike and in upper field l., eight-rayed star. BMC 436 Giesecke, pl. 22,7 (these dies) De Luynes 1343 (these dies) Jameson 872 (these dies)
Rare. Metal flaw on obverse, old scratch on reverse, otherwise a pleasing coin with old dark tone.

The tridrachm denomination, weighing two reduced Corinthian staters, represents an attempt to align Syracuse with new commercial conditions.

Hieron II, 274-216

- 83 Gold 5-litrae or Attic drachm, AV 4.27 g. Head of Kore-Persephone l., similar to previous, but in field r., poppy-head. Border of dots. Rev. Chiton-clad charioteer driving cantering biga r., reins in l. hand, kentron in r.; below, IEPΩNOΣ, beneath which, Α. BMC 510 (this obv. die) and 514 (this rev. die) Hirmer pl. 49, 139 (this obv. die)
Fine style, almost extremely fine 4,500.-

Hieron borrowed the obverse of Hicetas's gold drachm and the reverse of Agathocles' to create his own gold piece almost exactly half the weight of the ubiquitous Philip II staters; while remaining on the Syracusan litra standard, the coin has a typology which seems to make it exchangeable against Macedonian gold with a slight advantage to the Sicilians, a thought which had doubtless already occurred to the wily Agathocles.

Democracy, 214-212

- 84 16-litrae, AR 13.53 g. Laureate head of Zeus l.; beneath truncation, Α. Border of dots. Rev. Winged Nike standing upright in quadriga r., urging her team into a walk, the nearside horse leading off and the others following, by raising the reins in both hands; above, ΣΩ, and in exergue, ΣΥΠΑΚΟΣΙΩΝ. Burnett, SNR 62, pl. 18 and pl. 8, D 2 (this coin); Enna hoard, 1966, 71 Jameson 890 (these dies) Maclean 2959 (these dies)
Very rare and practically as struck. Extremely fine 10,000.-
- 85 12-litrae, AR 10.08 g. Head of Athena l., wearing crested Corinthian helmet decorated with running griffin as crest-holder, circle-and-bar and single-pendant ear-ring and dotted necklace, her abundant hair escaping at side and neckpiece of helmet and flowing over her shoulders; at throat, snake (representing aegis) l. Border of dots. Rev. Artemis, wearing half-boots and short tunic and with quiver over r. shoulder, hair caught up, shooting with bow l.; behind her, hound leaping forward l. In field r., ΣΥΠΑΚΟΣΙΩΝ downwards, and l., YA above Σ-Α. Burnett, p. 23 and pl. 9, D 33

Uncertain Sicilian mint (Lilybaeum ?)

- 86 Tetradrachm, about 320, AR 17.00 g. Head of Tanit-Persephone l., wearing barley-wreath and surrounded by dolphins, after the decadrachm of Euainetos. Border of dots. Rev. Horse's head three-quarter l., the mane carefully dressed; in field r., palm-tree with fruit and beneath truncation, Α (17 44) (= 'MMHNT = people of the camp = for the army). Linear border. G.K. Jenkins, Coins of Punic Sicily part 3, SNR 56, 1977, 152 (these dies, obv. 47, rev. 137)
A beautiful reverse die, recorded in only one other specimen. Extremely fine 3,500.-

Carthage

- 87 Stater, about 330, AV 9.14 g. Head of Tanit l., hair waved and rolled, wearing barley-wreath, three ears and one leaf visible, double-bar and triple-pendant ear-ring and dotted necklace with pendants and tie; border of dots. Rev. Free horse standing r. on exergual line; before near fore hoof, three pellets . . . Border of dots. These dies not published in G.K. Jenkins and R. Lewis, Carthaginian Gold and Electrum Coins, 1963, cf. Group III f, 29-51
Better than very fine 4,500.-

Note the wonderful confidence expressed by the Carthage mint in putting no ethnic on its coins.

- 88 Trihemistater or reduced 1 1/2 - shekels, about 260, AV 12.49 g. Type as previous, but in rich Carthaginian style; at brow, pellet, and beneath front of scooped truncation of neck, two pellets . . . Border of dots. Rev. Free horse standing r., looking back; border of dots. Jenkins and Lewis, Group IX, cf. 387 (obv. 384-390, this die, rev. die unpublished)
Very rare and a new die combination with a large flan. A lovely coin, good extremely fine 15,000.-

Illustrated on colour plate 1

Jenkins, op. cit., p. 108, 384 n implies the use of pellets as control-marks on obverse as well as reverse dies in this class, but fails to see on this obverse die further evidence in the form of pellets carefully distinguished by size and position from pendant ends and border dots.

Acragas

- 89 Shekel, about 213-211, AR 6.15 g. Head of a dynast (Hannibal ?) with long side-whisker, wearing laurel-wreath entwined with linear-edged diadem, diadem ties flowing behind neck; border of dots. Illustrated on colour plate 1 and enlargement plate B

Burnett, op. cit., p. 12, while attributing all the other Punic coins in the Enna find to Acragas, prefers to put this coin to the Carthage mint, solely on account of its fixed die axis. Against this should be said that there is little resemblance to Carthage issues, Jenkins classes XIV and XV (part) of the time, even allowing for the small silver "exported" denominations, Jenkins, Essays Mildenberg, pp. 134 f., while for style and technique the half-shekels of this series are indistinguishable from the "Triptolemos" / free horse half shekels, cf. Burnett 117 and 133, and 123 and 140; the obverse is clearly derived from the 16-litrae of the Syracusan democracy, B.D. 2-4, exactly repeating Zeus' aquiline nose, prominent frontal bone and curved truncation and shoulder modelling; types and style recall Punic Spanish "elephant" issues of the previous decade, Robinson series 6, in which die axes were fixed. An engraver trained in Spain or at Carthage may have been employed to start off well a rapidly-degenerating coinage. The diadem-wreath of the obverse is a newly-observed feature, but the head remains enigmatic, not following Spanish (Robinson, supra) or Syracusan (B. D 39-47) prototypes for Heracles (Melqart); still less is it a Greek Zeus. It may well depict a dynast (cf. Hasdrubal's double shekel and shekel, R. 4 (b and c), Hannibal being the obvious candidate. Portraits on Carthaginian coins are found solely on Spanish, Barcid issues and must always have been highly irregular, even if tolerated. In this case the presence of Spanish armies in Italy and Sicily may have excused, or encouraged, a practice already widespread elsewhere, the omission of a name making it more acceptable, as earlier at Carthago Nova. For the wreath-diadem, see note to no. 141 below; there was a Pergamene tetradrachm, of later type, in the Enna find and they travelled even to Spain, Burnett p. 15.

Mende

- 90 Tetradrachm, about 485, AR 16.95 g. Bearded Dionysus, naked to waist, head turned three-quarter r., holding cantharus in r. hand and reclining on back of ass walking r.; in exergue, caduceus r. and NI; border of dots. Rev. From the same dies as our specimen NAC 1991, 98, but in a superior state of conservation, the obverse in especially high relief providing a marvellous classical icon. Striking crack in upper r. obv. field, otherwise
extremely fine 9,000.-

- 91 Tetradrachm, about 390-350, AR 12.64 g. Head of young beardless Dionysus l., wearing luxuriant ivy-wreath, crowned by flower, over long flowing hair, wreath-ties behind neck. Rev. MENA-AION lower l. to upper r. around ass standing l. in act of moving off, head raised and penis erect, while crow perches on its rump r. and pecks under its tail. SNG ANS 380 and 381
Beautifully struck and toned, an exceptionally fine specimen of this engaging scene of rustic felicity and a coin of great rarity not represented in most important collections. As struck, extremely fine 7,000.-

The ecologically-sound reverse is a revival of a late archaic obverse type, cf. Babelon, Traité pl. 314, 6, 7, 8 and, especially, Pozzi 1540, where type to l. as here.

Olynthos

Chalcidian league

- 92 Tetradrachm, about 383-379, AR 14.42 g. Laureate head of Apollo l., his rather short hair carefully curled. Rev. X-A-AKIA-EQN from bottom l. around seven-stringed cithara seen from above, showing playing surface, cross-hatched carrying strap with hanging ends shown to r. of sounding board; above, tripod crowned by laurel-branch. D. Robinson and P. Clement, The Chalcidic Mint and the excavation coins found in 1928-1934, 1938, 75 (obv. 49, rev. 68) and enlargement pl. 18 Gulbenkian II, 420 (these dies)
Rare. Excellent late classical style. Grey tone, good very fine 7,000.-

The beautiful obverse furnished the model for the Apollo head on the staters of Philip II of Macedon.

- 93 Tetradrachm, about 355, 14.40 g. Similar to previous, but Apollo's hair is somewhat longer; border of dots. Rev. Generally as previous, but legend is disposed X-A-A-KIA-EQN from upper l., tripod is replaced by ΔE, and beneath lyre, ΕΠΙ ΤΙΜΑΡΧΟΥ. Cithara is more square and strap is plain; border of dots. Robinson and Clement 97 (obv. 64, var.) Rare. A good illustration of the last phase of classical Greek art. Extremely fine 12,000.-

The supposed double-striking on the obverse of all recorded specimen of this coin is actually an early recutting of the die which has left an overlapping border upper l. and a faint shadow along the line of the hair and profile.

Thraco-Macedonian tribes

Bisalti

- 94 Octodrachm, about 475-465, 28.59 g. ΒΙΣΤΥΤΙ(KO)N Naked man swearing causia, standing, upper torso to front, head and legs to r., behind bridled horse going r. on dotted exergual line; in background, two long spears diagonally from bottom l. Border of large dots. Rev. Quadripartite incuse square in regular compartments almost completely filled in. Unpublished. Cf. Gulbenkian II, 434 (tetradrachm of normal type) and D. Raymond, ANS NNM 126, 1953, pl. 2,4 (drachm of this type) and J. Svoronos, JIAN 1918-1919, pl. 11, 9, 10 and 12 (drachms of this type) Of the highest rarity, perhaps unique. Extremely fine 20,000.-

Illustrated on colour plate 2

The existence of an octodrachm with ethnic which would accompany the rare anepigraphic drachms of the Bisalti with horseman with two spears upwards has not hitherto been recorded. The highly polished very late archaic style would relate it to the second coinage of Alexander I of Macedon, dated by Price and Trell in Asyut, 1975, to c. 479-475, rather than to earlier tribal issues such as Raymond, op. cit., pl. 2,2. As there were no coins of the Bisalti in the Asyut find, buried c. 475, they have been linked to the Athenian expeditions to the Thracian coast c. 475-465. On the basis of developed style, our coin should therefore be assigned to c. 470 or a little later.

Derrones

- 95 Dodecadrachm, about 475-465, AR 39.57 g. Draped male figure seated r. on throne-like ox-drawn chariot, raising whip in r. hand; in field above, Corinthian helmet r., and r., downwards and outwards, continuing into exergue, ΔΕΡΟΝΙΚΟ(N). Exergual line of dots between plain lines and border of large pellets. Rev. Triskeles running l.; in interstices, floral ornament resembling palmette. Traité -- AMNG -- cf. Svoronos pl. 1, 14 (decadachm (?) of the same types without legend) and pl. 2, 1 (dodecadrachm of same types l., with legend ΔΕΡΟΝ retrograde) Appears to be unpublished. Very fine 8,000.-

This new variety, part of the class of Derronian silver with triskeles reverse, should on account of the entire class's absence from the Asyut hoard be dated after c. 475.

Ichnae

- 96 Octadrachm, about 490-480, AR 28.17 g. Naked man, wearing causia and necklace, hair arranged in two long plaits falling over shoulders, conducting l. two oxen, between which he stands, r. hand restraining the inner animal, its head thrown up, and l. beside r. flank of the outer beast, its head lowered; exergual line of dots between plain lines. Around, from l. to r., (IXN)-AI-ON. Chariot-wheel of four spokes within shallow incuse square. Asyut 42 (this coin) cf. Svoronos, pl. 4, 5-6 (similar types to r.) A most attractive example of this very rare coin. Very fine 15,000.-

- 101 Stater, Lampsacus about 230, AV 8.38 g. Laureate head of Apollo r., hair short, in weak classical style. Rev. Charioteer, wearing chiton and with kentron in r. hand and reins in l. driving biga with clumsy cantering horses r.; in field low r., curled snake and Α, in exergue, ΦΙΛΙΠΠΟΥ. Le Rider, p. 283, 7-8. H. Seyrig, R.N. 1969, p. 43-44
A rare and unusual issue. Much die lustre, about extremely fine 3,000.-

The coin is probably from the Anadol (Odessa oblast, Ukraine) hoard, 1895, IGCH 866 and no doubt passed to the tribes of what was then Royal Scythia with the other c. 1200 gold staters in the find in payment for wheat, honey, furs and so forth. The original occasion for striking this stater as well as pseudo-Alexander gold, Price, Alexander, 1457, has been sought in the last years of the reign of Antiochus Hierax, 241-228.

Alexander III, 336-323

- 102 Double stater, "Amphipolis" about 330-320, AV 17.17 g. Head of Athena r. wearing triple-crested Corinthian helmet with curled serpent upright as secondary crest-holder; her hair emerges from under visor and as four long ringlets from neck-guard and is visible under nose-piece and over l. shoulder; she wears double-bar and vertical cluster ear-ring and dotted necklace. Rev. Nike, draped and with open wings, her hair in top-knot, standing l. holding wreath in extended r. hand and in l., stylis (mast); in field l., cantharus, and r., ΑΛΕΞΑΝΔΡΟΥ downwards. M. The reverse commemorates Antigonos' defeat with the aid of the Syrian Antiochus Hierax, half-brother of Seleucus II and usurper in western Asia Minor, to whom the reverse Apollo is a compliment, of the fleet of Ptolemy III Euergetes off Caria, 227. The full-blown baroque extravagance of the obverse of our coin, apparently only the second recorded with this monogram, is balanced by the solid elegance of the reverse, a far more competent composition than usual.

Philip V, 220-179

- 109 Tetradrachm, Series II, 212-197, 16.87 g. Macedonian shield decorated on border with design of eight-rayed stars (suns) enclosed in double crescents (or half-shields) and, within two inner concentric linear circles, displaying head of hero Perseus l., wearing winged Phrygian helmet crowned with griffin's head, harpe before and over r. shoulder. Rev. Club of Hercules r. between, above, ΒΑΣΙΛΕΩΣ, and below, ΦΙΛΙΠΠΙΟΥ; all in oak-wreath. Boehringer, Chronologie, AMuGS V 1972, pp. 108 ff and 116 ff and pl. 8, 6-9
Rare. Very fine 2,000.-

Formerly attributed to the usurper Andiscus, this coin has now been shown to belong to the second issue of Philip V. The image of Perseus, as on Philip's gold stater, seems in part interchangeable with the Roma head of the first denarius, 211, though not until 115-114 does Roma don a Phrygian helmet in the silver series, on the denarius of Categus, Cr. 288/1.

- 110 Tetradrachm, Series III, about 188/187-183-182, AR 17.00 g. As previous, but Perseus has the bearded, mature features of Philip and the griffin's wing is clearly shown. Rev. The extraordinary gold coinage of Panticapaeum may be seen as the response of a commercially powerful city to the mass issues of Macedonian Attic-weight staters after c. 345 and the heavy weight of the early issues as an attempt to make its money more acceptable in a competitive market, Minns, Scythians and Greeks, 1971. Zograph's view, op. cit., is that it was made to circulate with Cyzicene electrum staters of equal value. The two opinions are not mutually exclusive. The reverse type shows the griffin, traditional guardian of precious metal deposits, in defensive stance warding off attack.

- 114 Attic stater, after 300, AV 8.52 g. As previous, but later style and flat fabric. Rev. As previous, but griffin's head is fully facing. K. Dittrich, Antike Münzen aus Olbia und Pantikapaum, 1959, 101 and pl. 87 Gulbenkian II, 588-590. Rare. Good very fine 25,000.-

Style and reduced weight indicate a date markedly later than that of no. 113.

Thrace

Abdera

- 115 Octadrachm, about 500-480, AR 30.41 g. Griffin seated l., with curled wing and r. foreleg raised in defense, beak open, mane in two volutes, (on base); in field l., upwards, EK, inwardly, AT, outwardly. Rev. Regular quadripartite incuse square, compartments almost filled in. Asyut 138 (this coin) J. May, the Coinage of Abdera, 1966, 45. Rare. Test-cut in upper r. field, otherwise very fine 3,000.-

The griffin has the same function as at Panticapaeum, this time guarding silver mines.

- 116 Aeginetic stater, about 390, AR 12.69 g. As previous, but in naturalistic mode; griffin's wings are shown slightly open, forepaws are both on irregular exergual line; in field upper r., (A)BAH, and centre l., cicada upwards. Rev. Bearded, mature Heracles seated half-left on lion's skin spread on rock, drapery over r. thigh, holding club downwards in r. hand, l. hand between legs; in field l. and r., upwards, ΕΠΙΦΙΛΑ-ΔΟΣ. J.M.F. May, The coinage of Abdera, 1966, -- cf. 397 (this obv. die) and 393 (this rev. die)

A new die combination. Beautiful detailed work and a very rare type. Obverse a trifle off-centre, otherwise extremely fine 7,000.-

For this type of weary Heracles at other cities, see Jenkins in Gulbenkian II, p. 28, 447. The original model will have been a statue similar to the later Heracles by Lysippus at Taras, showing Heracles exhausted and pensive after cleaning the Augean Stables, LIMC 4, 1, p. 773.

- 117 Tetrobol, about 390, AR 2.84 g. Griffin springing l.; in field r., ABA. Rev. ΕΠΙ-ΠΡΩ-ΤΕΩ from low l. around square linear frame enclosing three barley-ears upright, all in shallow incuse square. May -- cf. 356 (this obv. die) and 358 (this rev. die) A second new die combination. Good very fine 500.-

- 118 Tetrobol, about 390, AR 2.88 g. As previous, but in slightly later style; ABAH above griffin and border of dots. Rev. Incuse square and frame as before, but frame is dotted and encloses dolphin diving l., and legend is ΝΥΜ-ΦΑ-ΓΟΡ-ΗΣ. May -- cf. 381 (this obv. die) and 382 (this rev. die)

A third new die combination. An adorable little coin. Sharp extremely fine 500.-

Nos. 117 and 118, together with their obverse, advertise the commercial strengths of Abdera: silver mining, agriculture and delphinophobic fishing.

Aenus

- 119 Tetradrachm, about 450, AR 16.50 g. Head of Hermes r. in pseudo-early classical style, wearing bead-bordered petasus with bobble, beneath which is seen hair plaited in chevrons around. Rev. Both May, who is very uncomplimentary about its workmanship, and the Kunstfreund catalogue fail to see that the upper part of the reverse die has been quite extensively reworked to correct a flaw visible through AI on May's pl. 1; it should be more correctly numbered 21/1. Between the two states the obverse die deteriorated markedly.

Maroneia

- 120 Stater, about 365, AR 11.11 g. Stallion about to gallop l., distinctively bushy tail raised, haltered with a rope that flies over withers and trails beneath belly. Rev. ΕΠΙ-ΧΟΡ-ΗΓΩ from upper l. around square linear frame enclosing vine with four grape-clusters and three shoots; at end of legend, fly, upright, cleaning itself; the whole in shallow incuse square. E. Schönert-Geiss, Die Münzprägung von Maroneia, 1987, cf. 440 (this obv. die; rev. die unrecorded) Perhaps unparalleled in the series for beauty of style and perfection of die-cutting and a new reverse die.

Well-centred and toned, sharp extremely fine 3,500.-

The scene is of a horse of local breed just escaped from its keeper, running to disport itself in a Thracian meadow; for the next picture in this pretty sequence, see S.-G. 426. Dionysiac release is clearly implied.

Thasos

- 121 Stater, about 510-480, AR 9.44 g. Naked bearded silenos with horse's ears and feet, hair arranged in long plaits over back, penis erect, carrying off maenad, wearing sleeved chiton, large circular ear-ring and plain necklace, hair also in plaits, l. arm lowered, r. raised in air. Ritual abduction as a form of exogamy was and is frequent in tribal society. The reference here is probably to the Dionysus cult, Thasos being a Parian colony, and is perhaps modelled on one of the stone reliefs from which Thasos was famous, as later with the Heracles archer type, Guide de Thasos, 1967. For another archaic treatment of the same theme, from Delphi, see Boardman, Greek sculpture; the Archaic period, fig. 210.

Kings of Thrace

Lysimachus, 323-281

- 122 Tetradrachm, Lampsacus about 297-282, AR 17.15 g. Head of divinised Alexander the Great r., with horn of Ammon, wearing taenia whose ends float behind; border of dots. Rev. Athena, draped and helmeted, seated l. on monumental throne with base, resting l. elbow on shield decorated with lion's head r. and with long downward-pointing spear diagonally over r. shoulder; she holds on open palm of r. hand Nike who crowns the name ΛΥΣΙΜΑΧΟΥ downwards l.; in field r., ΒΑΣΙΛΕΩΣ downwards. In inner field l., lighted torch, and on throne, star. M. Thompson, The mints of Lysimachus, Essays Robinson 1968, 43 NAC 4, 1991, 93 (this obv. die in later state)
Superb medallistic striking, the new dies of gem-like clarity and the highest style of the period, comparable with the celebrated Pergamum tetradrachm, Hirmer pl. 176, 580 Grey tone, good extremely fine 5,000.-

Illustrated on colour plate 2

The deep-set, yet prominent eyes and gentle penetrating gaze of Alexander must have been well known to Lysimachus from personal contact, as they were to Ptolemy, who gives them the same treatment on his tetradrachm, Hirmer pl. 217, 796.

Thessaly

Larisa

- 123 Drachm, about 430, AR 5.97 g. Naked ephebos struggling to restrain bull which endeavours to plunge away r.; his chlamys is slipping from l. shoulder and petasos has fallen off head into field l.; hind legs of bull and r. leg of youth rest on short ground line. Border of dots. Rev. ΛΑ-ΠΙΣΑ written boustrophedonically above and below stallion prancing to r., reins knotted over withers, all in slightly incuse linear square. L. Herrmann, Die Silbermünzen von Larissa in Thessalien, ZfN 35, 1925, pl. 2,5 (obv.) and 2 (rev.).
A rare issue in very fresh condition. Good extremely fine 2,000.-

Both sides of the coin taken together represent a scene at a taurokathapsia, a Thessalian festival game for the young nobility, for which see Jenkins in Gulbenkian II, p. 33. Greek coins rarely allow themselves to be infected by the sense of humour so evident here in the treatment of the obverse subject.

- 124 Drachm, about 370, AR 5.99 g. Head of nymph Larisa three-quarter r., smiling, wearing linear necklace with jewel at throat, abundant hair dressed in careful waves and restrained by ampyx; border of dots. Rev. ΛΑΠΙ above mare with cropped mane moving slowly over field shown as dotted exergual line, grazing. Herrmann, pl. 8, 5
Rare. An absolutely enchanting "portrait" coin. Beautifully toned, extremely fine 1,500.-

- 125 Didrachm, about 350, AR 12.17 g. As previous, but Larisa is three-quarter l., hair is more loosely arranged and there is no jewel on necklace. Rev. Bridled stallion trotting r. en manège, tail held high, reins knotted over withers; above, $\Lambda\Lambda\text{PI}$, and below plain exergual line, $\Sigma\text{AI}\Omega\text{N}$. Herrmann pl. 5, 1
Rare. Obverse overstruck on itself, so that remains of border of dots seem to put pearls in Larisa's hair, otherwise an unusually expressive obverse die and a superb reverse. About extremely fine 4,500.-

From this period the standard obverse type is obviously modelled, with some simplification, on the Kimonian facing Arethusa head tetradrachm of Syracuse, Hirmer pl. 44, 122.

- 126 Trihemionbol, about 340-320, AR 1.18 g. Precisely as previous. Rev. $\Lambda\text{AP}-\text{I}\Sigma-\text{AI}\Omega\text{N}$ arranged from upper l. around horseman, naked but for chlamys over l. shoulder and causia, riding bridled horse prancing r. Herrmann pl. 6, 1
Rare. Obverse from a corroded die, otherwise very fine / extremely fine 800.-

The Thessalian cavalry consisted, as at Taras, of mounted youthful nobles with pedigrees as long as their horses' and was, as might be presumed from Philip II of Macedon's easy and diplomatic annexation of Thessaly, about as effective as the Tarentine.

Rare and better than very fine 600.-

Pharcadon

- 128 Hemidrachm, about 430, AR 2.87 g. As no. 123, but forepart of bull only; border of dots. Rev. Shallow incuse square in which forepart of free horse prancing r.; around, from upper l., $\Phi-\text{A}-\text{P}-\text{KA}-\Delta\text{O}$. BMC 1 SNG Cop. 209-211

Reverse slightly double-struck. Extremely fine 600.-

Attica

Athens

- 130 Tetradrachm, about 490, AR 16.90 g. Head of Athena r. in crested Attic helmet, crest with geometric pattern, helmet has volute at base of bowl and double border on neck-guard; Athena wears large round ear-ring and hair in double lines (six groups) ending in volutes. Rev. Owl standing to r., wings folded, head to front; in field r., $\text{A}\Theta\text{E}$ downwards, and from upper l., olive-spray; all in shallow incuse square. C. For the earliest form of this obverse, see Münzen und Medaillen sale 37, 1968, 188. Unusually broad flan. A splendid example of an extremely rare sub-group. About good very fine 4,000.-

Ex Leu 30, 1982, 119, Münzen und Medaillen 41, 1970, 104 and Naville-Ars Classica 14, 1929, 263 sales.

This excellent piece has been rather cruelly treated by catalogues through its misfortune in not having a secure place in the Seltman repertoire. It belongs to a period of late archaism where owls and letters are very variably arranged, yet its obverse clearly puts it next to two well-established groups between which it seems to form a bridge.

Aegina

A masterpiece of late archaic style and in very high relief, extremely fine 7,000.-

Illustrated on colour plate 2 and enlargement plate B

With a firm archaeologically based terminus post quem non of before 470, this coin through its reverse die will make a true monnaie de transition between the issues with small Pegasus l. with ♀ and those with large Pegasus r. with ♂, with which it is die-linked, Ravel 198, which later evolve rapidly into an early classical style, and thus stands in a securely dated context as the very last wholly archaic issue of Corinth.

- 133 Stater, about 350-306, AR 8.59 g. As previous, but Pegasus with slightly curved wing and of later style; beneath, ♀. Rev. Type generally as previous, but no incuse square or necklace, and Athena's hair flows in loose waves from under neck-guard; in field l., bucranium and Δ. Lampsacus

- 139 Persic drachm, about 370-330, AR 5.19 g. Archaising janiform female head with circular ear-ring and dotted necklace, hair indicated by dots, wearing taenia; border of dots. Rev. Archaising head of Athena l. wearing wreathed Corinthian helmet, long hair on neck indicated by dots, \times behind; all in shallow incuse rectangle. SNG von Aulock 7391 (these dies) cf. 1291 (kerykeion on rev.) Very rare. Good very fine 3,000.-

The reverse is copying a Corinthian stater of c. 480/70, cf. our no. 132, rather badly, since wreathed helmets do not appear at Corinth until c. 330, where they are associated with at least one issue imitating a coin of Taras of c. 332. Since the extensive series of Persic tetrobols and diobols must be fixed in the late 4th century or beyond, cf. von Aulock 1293, reverse copying an Alexander gold stater, it is hard to believe in a gap of forty years or more between the large denomination and the small. The electrum staters of this city could imitate earlier foreign coins such as the Athens tetradrachm, MFAB 1601.

Kings of Pergamum

Philetaerus, 282-263

- 140 Tetradrachm, about 274-272, AR 17.18 g. Elderly portrait of divinised Seleucus Nicator with short hair r., wearing heroic plain diadem without ends (strophion); border of dots. Rev. Athena, draped and wearing crested Corinthian helmet, seated l. on monumental throne decorated with lion's foreleg and resting l. elbow on statuette of seated sphynx r., downward-pointing spear diagonally over (here, in error, under) l. shoulder, round shield with boss of apotropaic gorgon-head l. under r. hand; in r. field downwards, ΦΙΛΕΤΑΙΡΟΥ, beside which r., strung bow; in upper field l., ivy-leaf, and on throne, A. E. Newell, The Pergamene Mint under Philetaerus, ANS NNM 76, 1936, 41 (very similar obv. die) and Pozzi, 2249.

Very rare, these dies represented neither in Newell nor in the great collections. An excellent example of late Greek classical realism in portraiture. Good very fine 20,000.-

Philetaerus, an accidental eunuch, was a Macedonian officer who while garrison commander for Lysimachus at Pergamum, seized the treasure there left and made himself ruler of the city under Seleucid protection. Having successfully seen off Gaulish invaders in 278-276, he shortly afterwards extorted from Antiochus I, himself in political difficulties, a greater measure of autonomy. Philetaerus himself was about seventy when he had this coin struck as a tribute both to his deceased patron Seleucus I of Syria and to his own careful politics. The reverse, modified from the Lysimachene type, cites his name but does not assume the title of Basileus. The obverse is one of the finest and most expressive of hellenistic portraits.

Eumenes I, 262-241

- 141 Tetradrachm, after about 262-258, 17.26 g. Head of Philetaerus, hair in profuse curls and with heavy features, r., wearing combined crown of taenia entwined with laurel-wreath, ties falling at neck; border of dots. Rev. As previous, but ivy-leaf is beneath Athena's r. arm and spear is clearly shown crossing l. shoulder. U. Westermarck, Das Bildnis des Philetairos von Pergamon, 1961, pl. 2, obv. XIX, rev. 3. For crown, see Westermarck, op. cit., pp. 21 and 22 note 5. Remarkably well preserved, about as struck. Bright, good extremely fine 3,000.-

Eumenes succeeded his uncle as ruler, not king, of Pergamum. Sometime near the beginning of the reign he substituted on the portrait of his predecessor for the heroic simple diadem taken over from the Seleucus I/Philetaerus coinage a mixed diadem formerly found elsewhere only on the later portrait of Nabis of Sparta, 207-192, and now recognized on the Hannibalic issues of Acragas, our no. 89 above.

The background to this interesting tetradrachm will be the intrigues of Egypt and Pergamum against Demetrius I of Syria. In the previous century Lebedus, in the Egyptian zone of influence, struck coins with Lagid portraits under the name Ptolemais and in fact this later issue, basically Athena/owl, gives much of the reverse up to a type derived from the gold and silver of Arsinoe II and Berenice II. The ambitious and successful style of its stephanephori is greatly superior to that of better-known cities such as Magnesia and Myrina and is quasi-medallion in character. Note Athena's ear-ring with flying Nike of familiar late classical type.

The cult implicit in the types is that of Hera Böopis, Barron, op. cit. pp. 4 and 91. The ox will be one of the pair, richly decorated, which drew the heavy car bearing the statue of the goddess at the time of her festival celebrating the Sacred Marriage, ὁ ἱερός γάμος.

Maussolus, 377-353

- 152 Phoenician stater, Miletus (?) between 377 and 366, AR 12.35 g. MA in field upper l. above forepart of lion r., shown as single foreleg, head reverted. Rev. Formalised star of eight rays emerging from central globule, four of which are flames, other four, lines of light. Traité pl. 90, 1 BMFA 1994 A great rarity and of some historical interest. Münzen und Medaillen catalogue says "traces de surfrappe" but these are not evident. Old cabinet tone, good very fine 6,000.-

Ex Münzen und Medaillen sale 66, 1984, 264.

Brett in Boston, op. cit., p. 253, attributes the coin to Miletus, as supposed satrapal residence before removal to Halicarnassus. The types are Milesian and Apollonian, solar lion and sunburst, and the treatment of types and the weight are characteristic to the point where this most rare stater can be seen as the apotheosis of the extremely common Phoenician diobols of the city.

Rare. Obverse fractionally double-struck, but sound metal with old cabinet tone, a classic piece. About extremely fine 7,500.-

The Helios head is borrowed from earlier money of Rhodes as mediated by Clazomenae. The reverse, however, commemorates the cult of Zeus Labrandeus, going back to Minoan times, established in Caria at the eponymously named temple-city of Labranda near Mylasa.

Apparently unrecorded (as a tetradrachm) with this official's name. A very rare denomination with this type, struck on an unusually large flan, the reverse especially sharp. Extremely fine 6,000.-

The identification of the reverse veiled female head as that of Artemisia II, wife, then widow of Maussolus, satrap of Caria, is the more plausible the more it is seen how different it is from the obverse's characteristic Greek mid-4th century style. Artemisia was ruling Cos as her husband's successor from 353 until her death two years later and, great egotists as they both were, would hardly have hesitated to put her portrait on coinage, in the Persian satrapal tradition. The type is anomalous to the Coan series and the heavy style and dramatic treatment are related to the Graeco-Lycian pot-pourri vulgarity of the known portrait fragments from the Mausoleum at Halicarnassus; to be noted are the tight frontal curls as on the also veiled statue of Artemisia (or a similar dynastic female) preserved in the British Museum, G. B. Waywell, The free-standing sculptures of the Mausoleum at Halicarnassus, 1978, passim. A memorial coinage of c. 350 is also a possibility.

Ex Rhodian hoard 1971.

In general terms, the model for the obverse was provided by the facing-head Syracusan tetradrachms of Eukleidas and Kimon of about 405-400, the line of descent then travelling downwards in the east to Clazomenae, c. 375, and Halicarnassus, c. 365, and in the west to Amphipolis and Larisa, c. 370-360. More particularly, other prototypes may be found for the literally burning gaze of the sun-god as protector and punisher, especially the river-god on Euainetos' Camarina didrachm of c. 410, which at Rhodes is handled with varying success, giving Apollo an appearance which is sometimes mad, Bérend 33, or Thatcherian, B. 82, or simply bemused, B. 50, or even nymph-like, B. 22. Our obverse belongs with the happy dies which ally divine power to benevolence, B. 7, 33, 62, 66 and 74, evoking the Syracusan masters. Our engraver also cut the obverse dies for B. 23 and 35, with differing reverse symbols and letters, illustrating the close-knit nature of the group. Apollo's "collar" offers problems: at Clazomenae it becomes a chlamys-cord with clasp, following a variant iconic original, and at Amphipolis, more true to Rhodes, drapery; it is probably the upper edge of a chiton of fine linen, cf. LIMC p. 289, 859 (Attic red-figure vase).

On all other issues of Aspendus, the wrestlers are epheboi. In this unique case we have a scene from the pankration, in which prodigiously strong fighters wrestled and boxed in a combat almost without rules. The extensive silver series of Aspendus, spanning over a century and in styles ranging from late archaic to full-blown late classical, is usually regarded as of stunning banality, but in this and the two previous lots have been brought together staters that resoundingly break the rule, as sometimes happens, cf. Hirmer, pl. 192, 663 and 665. An earlier coin of this city, with a warlike population of mixed Pamphylian and, supposedly, Argive stock, has as reverse type the lion and triskeles of a solar cult, Head, p. 599, only the triskeles surviving later, as a permanent symbol. The games here celebrated, wrestling being the chief event of the pentathlon, are therefore presumably of Pythian type in honour of Apollo, though as wrestling was thought of as part of military training, there is an obvious connection with the reverse slinger.

The mouse is associated with Astarte as a goddess of vegetation and fertility, since it was supposed to be, like the snake, a chthonic or "underground" animal. The obverse type was copied almost exactly by Amastris at Amastris c. 300, to depict Anahita.

Sometime in the period c. 255-246, a federal reorganisation of Cyrenaica was undertaken by the Academic philosophers Ecdelus and Demophanes of Megalopolis at the time when under King Magas' widow Apame and daughter Berenice successively the country was independent from Egypt. Its now sparse coinage seems to have been struck at the capital. This political experiment in constitutional reform was extinguished when Berenice married Ptolemy III Euergetes and the two lands were reunited.

ITALIAN CAST COINAGE

The origin of the aes grave cast coinage is to be sought in the central Italian bronze currency system of the 1st millennium B.C. for which we have anachronistic Roman sources, inclined to invent historical as well as monetary events and making the beginning of its coinage respectably antique by associating it with king Numa Pompilius. Pliny, for example, N. H. 33, 35, quoting Timaeus, claimed that Servius Tullius was the first king to mark bronze in Rome.

The evidence of primitive bronze (aes rude) and bar (aes signatum) hoards throughout central Italy confirms the use of a bronze currency in need of reweighing with each transaction, the unit of weight being the libra, pondus or as, i.e., the "pound", weighed (pensum) and not counted (numeratim) by weighers or cashiers (dispensatores). Soldiers received pay (stipendium), payments were weighed out (expensa) and estimates were weighed (aestimatio). All these terms lasted well beyond the introduction of struck coinage and have passed into modern languages. The word As is perhaps of Greek origin, signifying "weighed". The primitive Roman libra had a theoretical weight of 288 scruples (about 324 g).

The first aes grave is probably no earlier than the Apollo / horse ROMANO nummus (Cr. 15/1) of about 280, and is cast on a heavy libral standard. Subsequently, lighter libral series were issued on a standard which was allowed to fall until the official semilibral revaluation of 217. The Second Punic War, 218-201, created a deep economic crisis in Italy which Rome and her allies tried to redress by successive revaluations until finally in about 212/211 cast bronze was abandoned completely and struck Asses on a sextantal standard took its place, being tarified at 10 to the new standard denomination, the denarius.

The 3rd century witnessed not only the relentless absorption by Rome of southern Italy, whence she derived so many cultural influences, but also her progressive domination of the Italic tribes and the Etruscan urban civilization. It is not surprising that Rome should adopt the currency of Magna Graecia, commissioning silver Mars / horse's head coins and related bronze, Cr. 22/1, from Naples possibly in the late 330's on the prevailing nomos standard, but by the 280's she had also a monetary system compatible with that of her central Italian neighbours.

178	Uncia, 29,5 g. Barley-grain; beside, o. Rev. Same type. Cr. 18/6 H. 36, 19 Green patina. Extremely fine	250.-

This series is based on an As of approximately 300 scruples (334 g) a little heavier than the traditional Roman pound, probably to compete with the heavy libral standards of Ariminum, Hatria and Vestini. The style is purely Greek and similar to the Apollo / horse nummi, Cr. 15/1 and struck bronze of the period.

Janus / Mercury series, about 270-260

- 179 As, 331 g. Head of young Janus, beardless and diademed; above, I. Rev. Head of Mercury I. wearing winged petasus.
Cr. 14/1 H. pl. 38, 2 Green-brown tone. Very fine 1,800.-

This obverse type has been identified by Crawford as a janiform head of the Dioscuri, his theory being based, apparently, on the considerably later denarii of C. Fonteius, Cr. 290/1. A more convincing identification would be that of a young Janus, as evidenced by the votive terracottas of the Etruscan equivalent, Culsans, found by the Porta Urbica at Tarquinia, within a short distance of Rome. It should also be noted that the beardless Culsans appears on the aes grave of Velathri, for which see no. 225, datable to the Hannibalic invasion period.

The weight standard is based on an As of 322 g., almost exactly the 288 scruples that make the Roman libral As. This series probably follows the Apollo / Apollo heavy libral As series but is notoriously difficult to date precisely.

Janus / Mercury and sickle symbol series, about 260-240

- 185 Semis, 156 g. Head of Minerva l., wearing crested Corinthian helmet; below, S . Rev. Female head l.; behind, sickle; below, S. Cr. 25/5 H. pl. 31, 5 Green patina. Very fine 1,200.-

The cast bronze series with the symbol of a sickle, an emblem of Mars, is struck on the standard of an As of 272 g. following or leading the tendency throughout central Italy to reduce bronze currency weight. Associated silver nummi and struck bronze have been dated by Crawford to c. 241-235.

The first Roma / Roma series is based on a 10-ounce As of about 265 g. and parallels the Roma / Victory nummi, Cr. 22/1, which bear control marks very similar to those on the silver decadrachms of Arsinoe II of Egypt, dated by Troxell, ANS MN 28, to between 253-241. The female head wearing a Phrygian helmet has been identified by Sydenham, CRR, and Carson, PCRI, as Diana Nemorensis, goddess of the religious centre of the Latin league. It is more probably the head of Roma wearing a Phrygian helmet as an allusion to the supposed Trojan descent of the Romans.

The wheel series is based on an As of 270 g. and at a ratio of bronze to silver of 1:120, the tressis is therefore the bronze equivalent of the contemporaneous Roma / Victory silver nummus, Cr. 22/1, of 6.75 g., probably struck in the closing stages of the First Punic War.

The reverse wheel is shared with some Etruscan aes grave series of uncertain mints (see nos. 226 and 227) as well as the silver 1-As of Populonia, cf. Sambon and Vecchi. The obverse deity has often been identified as Diana, whose cult was very ancient at Rome, or Bellona, the Roman goddess of war. She is perhaps to be seen as the personification of Rome characterised as the foundress of the city, the form of the helmet being an allusion to her Trojan origin. The iconography of the shared Roma obverse of this series is drawn from the Athena head of the Velian nomos of period V, Mangieri 150-157, while the parallel series of silver nummi, retaining the Phrygian-helmeted Athena obverse type, largely borrows its reverse from the trophy-building Nike of the Agathocles Kore/Nike tetradrachm, our no. 81.

Among the many customs borrowed by the Romans from the Etruscans when under the latter's domination was the art of divination, a particular branch of that science being the pullaria auguria. Augurs were appointed to study before a battle the feeding patterns of selected chickens in order better to judge the likely outcome of the engagement. The two stars in the field are perhaps to be associated with the Dioscuri. The reverse tridents and dolphins with their clear allusion to Neptune are to be associated with Rome's rise as a naval power during the course of the First Punic War, 264-240, and should be compared with similar reverses on the bronze coinage of Hieron II of Syracuse, cf. SNG ANS 964-1015.

These rectangular bars cannot readily be tied into the currency of the period; in form they are reminiscent of the simple "ramo secco" bars which circulating alongside aes rude fragments, formed the earliest bronze currency of central Italy. Their average weight, at over 1000 g., relates them to the aes grave as 4-5 As pieces, suggesting that they are to be thought of not so much as coins but as forms of money-medallion convertible by weight or division into current coin but equally appropriate for presentation purposes or storage as ingots in a quasi-bullion capacity, or for laying up as votive in a temple treasury (aerarium).

Minerva / Bull series, mid 3rd century

- 206 As, 332 g. Head of Minerva facing, wearing helmet with three crests. Rev. Bull walking r., head facing; above, value-mark I; in exergue, ROMA. Cr. 37/1b H. pl. 55, 1 Green patina. Very fine 6,000.-

The mint of this rare As may well be the Roman military colony of Luceria, since the mark of value I is sometimes in the form of \downarrow (Cr. 37/1a), the mint mark of that city. The weight is that of an As of about 279 g. which would indicate a fairly early date during the First Punic War, 264-240. The inspiration for the obverse seems to be Athena Parthenos as employed on the bronze of Metapontum, SNG Cop. 1251, while the reverse bull is very similar to the bull/bull bar, Cr. 5/1, perhaps having the function of an ingot for presentation purposes.

Janus / Prow to left series, about 225-217, early in the period

- 208 Sextans, 41 g. Head of Mercury l., wearing winged petasus. Rev. Prow l.; below, oo. Cr. 36/5 H. pl. 22, 19

The new Janus / prow coins were accompanied by a new nummus called by Pliny quadrigatus, depicting a young Janus similar to that found on the obverse of the Janus / Mercury full libral As, no. 179, initially issued on an As standard of about 10 ounces (270 g.) soon declining to about 9 ounces (240 g.). The relative rarity and superior production of the left facing prow group would place them in the first phase of the prow series.

The average weight standard is that of an As of about 128 g., a reduction undoubtedly due to the economic consequences of the outbreak of the Second Punic War, 218-201, and Hannibal's invasion, the theoretical weight being 144 scruples (162 g.). The continuing struggle against Hannibal was to have critical consequences for the Roman monetary system. The semilibral revaluation was found to be insufficient and the Roman state set itself upon an inflationary course that resulted in ever higher denominations, putting greatly increased marks of value on coins which by weight would previously have been of lower denominations. The decussis and quincussis, to which series our tressis belongs, form the high-water mark of this process and at this point the further revaluation of cast bronze must have seemed impossible, and an almost immediate reform was determined upon which was to bring into being the ten sextantal As silver denarius, replacing the quadrigatus which had pari passu with the bronze followed its own inflationary path, that of progressive debasement.

This well cast Semis has been attributed by Thomsen to the mint of Rome, an attribution based on the find spots of two examples, Aricia and Palestrina. The bull's head is similar in style to the bull / bull bar, Cr. 5/1, and the reverse Minerva / bull As, no. 206, which although marked ROMA, is of uncertain mint. The abundance of uninscribed aes grave grouped under the rubric of Uncertain of Central Italy remains one of the most mysterious areas in ancient Italian numismatics. Until more hoards and find spots are located, it will remain impossible to relate these issues to mint cities. These coins form a homogeneous monetary system which will probably have followed the pattern of the money of Rome, the dominant power in the region. The effect of the Second Punic War on these obscure mints was terminal.

Luceria, captured by the Republic from the Samnites in 315/314, was refounded as a Roman colony and was to become a centre of the highest strategic and financial importance for the whole of the 3rd century. It issued local cast coinage bearing magistrates' names as well as parallel issues for Rome herself signed with the distinctive  mint mark. Our no. 206 is a coin that may well have been made in parallel issues at both Rome and Luceria as was the post-semilibral Janus / prow series, TV 287-288, during the Second Punic War period. The find-spots of Carthaginian and Hispano-Punic coins in the area seem to indicate that at some point Luceria and its environs were occupied by Hannibal's troops. The reappearance of the characteristic  mark on victoriati, denarii and quinarii was to come in c. 211.

To be placed amongst the oath-scene gold series of 6 and 3 scruples, related silver quadrigati and cast bronze of the period from the beginning of the Second Punic War in 218 down to the bronze sextantal As revaluation of c. 211, is the remarkable 4-scruple gold thirty-As piece here offered. The weight standard is based on a gold As of approximately $\frac{2}{15}$ of a scruple (0.15 g). Known only from four examples, this coin was long been considered controversial and therefore was condemned by Crawford in RRC. However, R. Thomsen in Early Roman Coinage II, pp. 261-265, provides a well considered argument for its authenticity, in agreement with Borghesi, Mommsen, Hultsch, Garrucci, Santzo, Haeblerlin, Gentilhomme, Bahrfeldt and Mattingly in his paper, First Age, JRS 1945.

Value-marks on the Roman, Etruscan and central Italian aes grave were a matter of course from early in the 3rd century. Populonia and Volsini had also scruple-standard gold and silver issues with marks of value and these were to be imitated by Rome; for an assessment of the period see I. Vecchi, The Coinage of the Rasna, a study in Etruscan numismatics, SNR 67, 1988, pp. 43-73. Since bronze had been for centuries the traditional currency of central Italy, and reweighed with each transaction, it would have seemed logical to tariff silver and gold at their bronze As equivalents; however, problems arose when as a consequence of economic crisis and war, the bronze coinage began qualitatively to change its nature from that of a real value currency to that of a token or fiduciary currency.

The outbreak of the Second Punic War caused such an emergency, and the over-valuation of the libral bronze As resulted in a gradual decline of weight formally recognized by the semilibral revaluation of about 217 to an As theoretically of about 144 scruples (162 g.) and a subsequent continuous decline of the bronze weight standard in what is called the post-semilibral reform from 215 to 212 when the triental standard was very soon followed by the quadrantal one. In about 212/211 Rome, followed by Etruria, finally stabilized the bronze As at the sextantal standard of 48 scruples (54 g.), simultaneously issuing a gold series of 60, 40 and 20 asses and a parallel silver series of 10, 5 and 2 1/2 asses (denarii, quinarii and sestertii) all grounded on the scruple basis, the scruple of silver being the sestertius, the unit of fiscal account. It is therefore clear that the 30-As piece will have been the immediate predecessor of the sextantal coinage, and issued at some point between 217 and 212/211 when Rome was trying to maintain a bronze As standard of about 144 scruples (162 g). The ratio of gold to silver seems to have been about 1:9 and silver to bronze 1:120, coming elegantly between the libral As period (3rd century - 217) when it was at about 1:10 and the sextantal period, when the gold to silver ratio fell to 1:8, the silver to bronze ratio remaining at 1:120. A gold As of 0.15 g. x 9 x 120 yields 162 g. = the theoretical weight of a semilibral As.

The identification of the youthful Janus head is argued in the note to the aes grave issue of Rome (see no. 179) where a parallel is drawn with the double-headed youthful Culsans issues of Velathri (no. 225). Stylistically, the 30-As piece slips easily into the mainstream of quadrigati (no. 252) and the gold oath-scene pieces without mark of value, Crawford 28/1-5, which show a solid Greek influence demonstrated also at Volsini on its 20- and 5-As gold pieces, Vecchi 10, 11 and 12. This style survived the debasement of the quadrigati and re-emerged with the 60, 30 and 20-As gold and 10-As silver denarii in about 211, the earliest of which have a production technique closely resembling that of our piece. The oath-scene coin very clearly depicts the old Italian ceremony of sacrificing a young sow when making a treaty of alliance (foedus), in this case in the face of Hannibal's challenge, accompanied by the practical and down-to-earth desire, through the use of a mark of value, to reckon and identify the new glamorous coin in bronze Asses, the traditional unit of account of central Italy.

A rare variety. Extremely fine 400.-
- The forms of ROMA on tablet have previously been classified as (a) incuse, (b) half-incuse and half in relief and (c) in relief. Clear on this coin is a fourth class (d), where the surface of the tablet is hollowed out to give the illusion of incuse letters which are in fact in relief, a sporadically recurrent feature. The obverse style of this coin and the next is reminiscent of late south Italian staters, especially of Neapolis.

- The moneyer's grandfather was a personal friend of Philip V and the realistic elderly care-worn portrait of the king in the distinctive Macedonian royal head-dress, quite different from the brilliant hero shown on no. 110 above, will have been one in the gens Marcia's possession. At the time of his death at the age of fifty-nine in 179, Philip had a treaty of friendship (amicitia) with the Roman people and is therefore portrayed here as a great historical figure rather than as a defeated enemy.

Porcia 4 A most interesting type. Toned, nearly extremely fine 600.-
- The scene shows a provincial citizen's appeal to the superior jurisdiction of a governor from the approaching punishment decided by a court of first instance. Two of the three leges Porciae de provocatione (199, 198 or 195 and period 150-135) are probably here conflated, the first extending the right of appeal in capital cases to citizens living in Italy or the provinces, and the second prohibiting the scourging of citizens without appeal.

Though noting the Cornelian gens' devotion to the cult of Jupiter, Crawford in discussing this issue finds no evidence to associate it with the temple of Jupiter Capitolinus, quite correctly, but fails to observe that the type in fact refers to Jupiter Victor, whose temple dedicated in 254/3 by Q. Fabius Maximus Rullianus had its 500th anniversary celebrated in A.D. 207 by Septimius Severus with a dated silver medallion, Gnechi I, 22, 2, which, with the omission of heavenly symbols, shows essentially this type with the identifying legend IOVI VICTORI. It is this scene of righteous force overcoming rebellion which will have been depicted on the tympanum, and since the occasion of the temple's foundation was the victory at Sentinum in 295, in which a Roman army overthrew a great force of allied Gauls and Italian tribes, especially Samnites, the moneyer, clearly of the Sullan party, and perhaps father of L. Cornelius Sisenna, pr. 78 and author of a history of the Social War and Sullan Civil War, will have been markedly anti-Italian. The 200th temple anniversary is anticipated by some years.

Well struck and prettily toned. Extremely fine 400.-

- 285 Q. Thermus M. f. Denarius, 103, AR 3.91 g. Head of Roma l., helmet crested and decorated with palm-branch between volutes. Rev. Q. THERM.MF in exergue; Roman soldier in combat r. with foreign warrior to protect comrade fallen at his feet. Cr. 319/1 B. Minucia 19
Exceptionally well struck and centred. Good extremely fine 600.-

The so-called "barbarian soldier" is defined as Macedonian by his characteristic round shield with large central medallion (see nos. 109 and 110) and as specifically royal by his bowl-shaped helmet embellished with two forward-pointing horns, for which see Cr. 293/1 (no. 275 above) with discussion of helmet, p. 259. The subject of Roman bravery on the battlefield may be involved with the battles of Heraclea, Asculum or Beneventum, with Pyrrhus, or with the capture of King Perseus at Pydna, 168. If the latter, the obverse palm-branch (not plume) may refer to the suppression by Perseus' later conqueror, L. Aemilius Paullus Macedonicus, in 181 of the Ligurian Ingauni, other Minucii, M. Rufus cos. 110, procos. in, notably, Macedonia and triumphator 106, and his brother, Quintus, being hereditary patrons of Liguria; only Macedonian matters, however, may be in question.

- 286 Q. Fabius Labeo. Denarius, 102, AR 3.90 g. Draped, turreted and veiled bust of Cybele r.; behind, control-mark K. Rev. Victory driving running biga r., bird (buteo) under horses' feet; in exergue, Q.FABI.C.F. Cr. 322/1a B. Fabia 1
Good extremely fine 600.-

For bird, see Crawford pp 326f. Cybele was brought to Rome in 205/204, and her games, the Ludi Megalenses, were instituted in 191. The obverse is perhaps intended as an anniversary celebration of the latter, then ninety years old.

Choice of types and the formula EX A(rgento) PV(blico) emphasize the populist and Marian sympathies of the moneyer.

- 288 M. Lucilius Rufus. Denarius, 101, AR 3.94 g. Helmeted head of Roma r., as no. 284, PV(ublicum) behind, all in laurel-wreath. Rev. Victory driving biga charging r., RVF above, and in exergue, M.LVCILI. Cr. 324/1 B. Lucilia 1
Extremely fine 500.-

As with the previous coin with the same formula, Marian appeal is made for popular support, as also by reviving the most familiar type of Roma r., not issued for some years, this time in a victorious context.

- 293 Q. Titius. Denarius, 90, AR 4.09 g. Syncretic male bust r. of archaic terminal type, with long beard and divine lock of hair falling over r. shoulder, wearing winged diadem. Rev. Pegasus rearing up r., on tablet inscribed Q. TITI. Cr. 341/1 B. Titia 1
Unusually well-struck, extremely fine 600.-

The types of this huge (over 250 pairs of dies for each silver emission) coinage can only be seen, in conjunction with the parallel issues of C. Vibius Pansa, some of which appear to be tentative and are now very rare, as a metropolitan response to the Italian threat posed in the Social War, 91-87. It is almost entirely Graeco-Roman in character and seems designed to assert the superiority and everlastingness of urbanised Romanitas and the certainty with divine aid of routing the enemy, to whom the hand of liberty and forgiveness is also extended. Cr. 341/1 above may be seen as the head of a terminal figure protecting the pomerium or boundaries of Rome by combining two banal subjects on herms, archaic bearded Bacchus/Liber and Mercury. Offspring of Medusa, Pegasus, the common reverse for Titius' issues, is an ancient apotropaic daimon, warding off harm, a solar animal and as such a symbol of immortality; Cr. 2, Bacchus (also strongly Liber, and associated with Ceres in her temple on the Aventine) is a spreader of irrational terror; Cr. 3, Victory is self evident; Vibius Pansa AR (and Titius AE) Cr. 342/1 and 2, Silenus (for Liber: civic rights) and Pan, signifying (enemy) panic; Cr. 3 Apollo as guarantor of treaties and avenger, and Ceres as Eleusinian Demeter, rebirth and eternity; Cr. 4-6, Apollo and Minerva Victrix in quadriga, a Romanised Athena Promachos, and patroness of Pegasus, as well as a bellicose response to Minerva on Italian issues.

- 294 L. Titurius L. f. Sabinus. Denarius, 89/88, AR 4.01 g. Bare head of the Sabine king Tatius r., SABIN behind, monogram TA(tius) before. Rev. Rape of the Sabine women; two Romans, in tunic, l., and tunic and cloak, r., abduct two struggling women; in exergue, L. TITVRI. Cr. 344/1a B. Tituria 1
Exceptionally fine, in high relief on large flan. F.d.c. 600.-

Illustrated on colour plate 6

Pace Crawford, but mostly following Morel, MEFR 1962, this huge military coinage (c. 300 pairs of dies) must reflect the Roman carrot-and-stick policy towards the Italian allies in revolt. Apart from the pun on the moneyer's name, which the Romans would have taken seriously, see Varro and Aulus Gellius passim, the reference is to reconciliation with Italians, Tatius and Romulus ruling jointly, and to their punishment and exploitation if they remained intractable (raptus Sabinarum). The other two issues of the same moneyer combined with the same obverse, Cr. 344/2-3, illustrate the killing of Tarpeia (treachery summarily revenged) and Victory in biga, the last linking with the enormous earlier issues of M. Porcius Cato (c. 120 pairs of dies for denarii, over 400 for quinarii) with reverse of Victory, and for the quinarii, with an obverse of Liber with, as Crawford suggests, association of the Porcii Catones with the leges de provocatione which were certainly a sop to Italian feelings.

Border of dots. Rev. Oscan warrior standing to front in attitude of repose, leaning r. hand on long down-pointed spear, l. hand resting on hip from which parazonium swings out, l. foot upon uncertain object (sarcina?); he wears crested helmet, cuirass and long cloak (paludamentum) from shoulders, wrapped around thighs, and looks r. to couched bull, head three-quarter l.; in exergue, issue-letter \mathfrak{A} (= D). Border of dots. Campana 129 (these dies) g or h or unrecorded.
Extremely rare variant, this outstanding group of three almost identical obverse dies with one reverse die known from only 23/24 examples, 8 only from this die combination, this specimen perhaps unrecorded. Small striking crack, extremely fine 2,500.-

The obverse is of a delicate beauty astonishing in the circumstances of its production, and the reverse expresses without sentiment a striking nobility of concept. The object beneath the warrior-hero's l. foot has been supposed to be the carcass of the Lupa Romana, which we see gored by the Italian bull on another issue, Campana series 6, 98-103, in perfectly recognizable form. On this otherwise well-executed reverse, the "wolf" is scarcely distinguishable as such, on some dies, Cam. 118, 125, being reduced to two pellets. It is interpretable as the double-tied sarcina or military pack of usual type. The scene is almost elegaic; between battles the warrior draws breath, his military cloak thrown about him, his impedimenta dropped to the ground, looking down protectively upon his ally the Samnite bull (Vitelia = calf-land = Italy) who lies recovering his strength beside him. There may be a deliberate ambiguity; to show the Roman wolf damaged would be acceptable, but dead, not; to hint, at it possible. The Social War was characterized by ferocious fighting alternating with peace overtures, exactly the message of the Roman coinage of the time.

With this and two other revived issues of c. 127, cf. their ancestors' Cr. nos. 263 and 264, Sulla honours his grandest supporters. Apollo, the common obverse, whose temple at this time was still extra pomerium and associated with medicine and prophecy, may be seen as establisher of treaties and hence as guarantor of Sulla's new order. Sulla is well attested as a believer in prophetic inspiration.

Cr. 403/1 B. Fufia 1 A little off-centre, superb. F.d.c. 800.-
- This issue with its meticulously cut dies and careful striking seems to have a quasi-medallic character; the number of dies too, 26/29, seem appropriate to a special coinage for quite wide distribution. The statement of the reverse, reconciliation between Rome and Italy as partners, equal and superior, equal and inferior, would fit the census year of 70.

In 85 at Dardanus in the Troad, Mithradates VI of Pontus, thoroughly defeated, was compelled by Sulla to sign a treaty by which he renounced all foreign conquests and undertook to remain within his own borders. At this point, he presumably entered in amicitiam populi romani, Sulla's own anomalous position not permitting him to impose crushing terms. As in the case of Philip V, no. 275 above, thirty years later, in 56, would make an appropriate anniversary for Sulla's son as moneyer to commemorate his father's great accomplishment. On certain reverse dies of this issue, see NAC 4, no. 250, Diana's crescent and a star coincide to make the Iranian badge of Pontus, ☼.

Trophy of Pontic arms, at the foot of which, kneeling captive r., between, r. and l., C. MEMMIVS - IMPERATOR. Cr. 427/1 B. Memmia 10 Brilliant, good extremely fine 600.-

The design on the trophy shield is, plausibly, a gorgoneion facing on outspread aegis, the Mithradatic badge so commonly employed on the bronze money of Eupator, and singularly appropriate on military equipment. For the moneyer's uncle's Pontic campaign, see Crawford p. 451.

- 333 Q. Cassius Longinus. Denarius, 55, AR 3.87 g. Youthful long-haired head of Genius populi Romani r., garlanded sceptre over l. shoulder. Rev. Eagle with half-opened wings standing r. on thunderbolt, between lituus and jug; in exergue, Q.CASSIVS. Cr. 428/3 B. Cassia 7 Extremely fine 700.-

PVB. around two-storey building of basilica type, the Villa Publica. Cr. 429/2b B. Didia 1a Excellent style, good extremely fine 1,000.-

The Villa Publica was restored, i.e., modernized, in 93 by T. Didius, cos. 98; its representation should be compared with that of the Basilica Aemilia, "restored" in 78, Cr. 419/3a-b; from the latter have survived fragments of late Republican reliefs of the utmost lightness and delicacy.

- 335 P. Licinius Crassus. Denarius, 55, AR 3.93 g. Laureate, diademed and jewelled bust of Venus Victrix r., dotted line over l. shoulder. Rev. P. CRASSVS - M. F. around and above lightly armoured long-haired female figure (Gallia Comata) with horned animal head-dress, holding long transversal spear and leading horse walking r. behind her, cuirass and shield l. and r. at her feet. Cr. 430/1 B. Licinia 18 Extremely fine 600.-

The obverse will be Venus Victrix, for whose favours and Sullan legacy Caesarians and Pompeians strove, cf. Cr. 319/1, 426/3, and later 440/1 (where defined as Fortuna p. R.) 448/1 and 452/2, 4.5 (now with oak-wreath); the cord (?) over her l. shoulder is perhaps that of Minerva's aegis. The reverse may be interpreted as Gallia Comata (long-haired Gaul, i.e., the whole recently conquered province outside G. Narbonensis) wearing the Celtic horned head-dress of a god such as Cernunnus; for which Roman parallels, as Juno Sospita, cf. Cr. 412, exist. She is shown bare-headed on the denarius of Saserna, Cr. 448/3. Here she is lightly armed, cf. Roma on the Calenus denarius Cr. 403/1, her equipment at her feet, and must represent the Gaulish light cavalry raised among young Crassus' newly-made clients when he was Caesar's legate from 58, from Armorica and Aquitania, for the Parthian war.

- 340 Q. Sicinius and C. Coponius. Denarius, 49, AR 4.02 g. Head of (Venus Victrix as) Fortuna populi Romani r., wearing diadem and ear-ring, FORT. P. R. around. Rev. Winged caduceus and filleted palm branch in saltire, III - VIR l. and r.; above, wreath, and below, Q. SICINIVS. Cr. 440/1 B. Sicinia 5 Brilliant, good extremely fine 600.-

The obverse type is in no way to be distinguished from the assumed Venus Victrix of the Lepidus denarius, Cr. 419/1a; the ribbons attached to the reverse palm imply, as always, sacrifice; in this case, to Victory.

- 341 C. Iulius Caesar. Denarius, mint moving with Caesar 49-48, AR 3.93 g. Elephant advancing r. towards horned and bearded serpent rising l. from ground; in exergue, CAESAR. Rev. Pontifical insignia: culcullus, aspergillum, securis and apex, l. to r. Cr. 443/1 B. Iulia 9 C. 49 Toned, extremely fine 700.-

The elephant is to be interpreted as the triumphator's processional animal, cf. Cr. 269/1, moving to crush oligarchy, rebellion and disorder, represented by the chthonic serpent, which, as part for the whole, will stand for the anguipede giants, emblems of anarchy and chaos, who rise from time to time from the underworld and attempt to overthrow Olympian order; cf. their representing barbarian invasion on the great altar of Pergamum, Pauly-Wissowa Supp. iii, "Giganten". It is a simple message, underwritten by Caesar's great authority as Pontifex Maximus to direct the official cult so as to guarantee the preservation of the state. This is a coin with two reverses, struck like other denarii with obverse and reverse having exactly equal value, as Cr. 434/2, on flat flans differing from the normal concave-convex pattern. A serpentine giant appears, literally thunderstruck, on the denarius of 45 celebrating Caesar's victories struck by L. Valerius Acisculus, Cr. 474/4.

- 342 L. Hostilius Saserna. Denarius, 48, AR 3.99 g. Head of a Gaulish warrior, bearded and with long hair (comatus), ethnically draped; behind, long Celtic shield. Rev. L. HOSTILIVS - SASERN around naked charioteer driving to r. charging biga, from which naked warrior with long shield casts spear l. towards rear; both men are long-haired and bearded. Cr. 448/2a B. Hostilia 2

The obverse of a superb expressive style; a coin rarely found in such near-perfect state. As struck and prettily toned, extremely fine 1,800.-

The obverse of this and the following coin make a sort of trailer for Caesar's Gallic triumph to come, male and female captives of typical Gaulish appearance from the new "hairy" provinces conquered by Caesar during more than nine years' campaigning. The Gaul's drapery seems to be the sleeveless tabard worn long over trousers favoured by Celts and Germans.

- 343 Denarius, 48, AR 3.89 g. Head of a Gaulish woman with long hair (comata) r.; behind, war-trumpet (carnyx) r. Rev. L. HOSTILIVS - SASERNA around facing statue of Artemis of Massilia of fifth-century type, richly dressed and wreathed, holding long spear in l. hand and resting r. on head of stag leaping l. Cr. 448/3 B. Hostilia 4 Prettily toned. Extremely fine 700.-

Carnyx and long oval shield, as on the previous lot, are shorthand for Gaulish; the statue of Artemis commemorates Caesar's clementia to Massilia, which he had taken fairly painlessly from the Pompeians in the previous year.

- 344 C. Vibius C. f. C. n. Pansa Caetronianus. Denarius, 48, AR 4.03 g. Ivy-wreathed head of Liber r., (PANSa) behind. Rev. Ceres, holding torch in l. hand, borne in biga of snakes r.; C. VIBIVS. C.F.C.N. to r. Cr. 449/3b B. Vibia 17 Very rare. Toned, nearly extremely fine 700.-

- 345 Albinus Bruti f. Denarius, 48, AR 4.01 g. Helmeted head of young Mars r. Rev. ALBINVS - BRVTI. F r. and l. of two carnyces in saltire; above, oval shield, and below, revolving chariot wheel. Cr. 450/1a B. Postumia 11 Extremely fine 600.-

The lowest object in the reverse schema is conventionally described as a round shield, yet such would have no place in Gallic war iconography where one would expect, after oval shield and carnyx, a chariot.

Another simple message from Caesar: protected by Venus Victrix, a hero of Trojan origin through pietas re-establishes the Roman state, as later in Aeneid, 6.

The star stands for Venus, perhaps, as with the crescent, Cr. 480/4, Caelestis; cf. the star in her hair on the significantly south Spanish issue, Cr. 468/2; or it could represent Caesar inter divos.

- 358 Denarius, 1st - 15th March 44 (?), AR 3.92 g. CAESAR DICT PERPETVO around veiled and wreathed head of Caesar r. Rev. As previous, but MACER downwards and shield beside Venus r. Alföldi IX, 1-6 Cr. 480/13 B. Iulia 50 C. 39

Unusually well struck. About extremely fine 3,400.-

The curious, even grotesquely exaggerated forward posture of the neck of Venus certainly indicates heartfelt prayer, which may as well be for Caesar dead as Caesar living. Why this enormous badly-made coinage in a time of peace and scarcely anything after 15th March for Mark Antony, cos. 44, when he was soon openly preparing war and extending his imperium illegally? The order of issues for Caesar's portrait coins may be pretty well established, but the points of time after the certainly lifetime issue with DICT. QVART., CR. 480/2 (including Cr. 481 and 482) and before the well-made posthumous and Antony issues, Cr. 480, 19-22, and 485, remain obscure.

A statement like (IIIvir) A(uro), A(rgento), A(ere), F(lando) F(eriundo) should refer, as later with the asses of Augustus, to monetary reform and stabilisation after a period of disorder. The coin is linked with Antony's veiled bust in mourning denarius, Cr. 480/22, by the obverse devices of apex/lituus (Pontifex Maximus) for Caesar and jug/lituus (Augur) for Antony, and through the Parilia reverse, Cr. 480/20-21, to the last of the "bad" Caesar portraits. For these last there are, roughly speaking, 300 pairs of dies, a figure to be compared with c. 600 for Carisius' denarius coinage (46, Cr. 464), c. 300 for Paetus (same year, Cr. 465) and over c. 700 for Cordius Rufus (same year, Cr. 463) to which coinage of the tresviri monetales must be added 100 for the aurei of Hirtius. If the mint of Rome could produce in such quantity in 46 coins of respectable to excellent quality, it could certainly strike massively from March 15th to 21st April 44 an emergency coinage of bad style and indifferent execution.

This splendid issue must have been struck in Sicily employing Roman moneyers fleeing Antony's Rome. One need not go so far as to identify dead Pompey with Neptune; in 67 he destroyed the Mediterranean pirates, a monstrous problem, in three months, and had every right to be thought of as a son or favourite of Neptune; the propitious star, as on the as, no. 356, is rather Pompey, sideribus receptus,

Bahrfeldt pl. 4, 19 (these dies) Cr. 491/1b B. Cestia 2
A very rare variety. About extremely fine 16,000.-

The types of this and the preceding coin associate the emblems of the magistracy with the attributes of Minerva, Corinthian helmet, snakes and (probably) owl; the meaning can be no more complicated than an appeal to recognize just and legal authority endowed with wisdom, cf. the reverse of Caesar's as, Cr. 476. The series will have been struck to pay the two African and one Italian legions who had just gone over to Octavian. The curule chair is clearly related to if not identical with that, obviously eagle-decorated, of Caesar shown on Octavian's denarius of 42, Cr. 497/2.

For Italia as a fresh country maiden, see Campana, Insorti italici, nos. 18, 110, 129. She would be more suitable than the obscurely recognized Sibyl (Cr. p. 501) as a bait for an Italian legion, just as African legions would be pleased to recognize Africa on their salary, cf. no. 366-7. There is some balance in the number of surviving pieces, too; one to two for Africa would be right. The reverse of Cybele is associated by Crawford with Victory, but as a sort of lower-class Isis with a bull sacrifice her cult can be seen as anticipating Mithraism with some military appeal.

Crawford has "misgivings", yet in a coinage riddled with cacography, a simple scribal error as here is almost predictable. The die-engraver, instead of mindlessly copying his model, paused to think about what he was doing and started to make AVGVR which he was obliged when he returned to his senses to continue as AVGVIR, omitting III for lack of space. The early imperial bronze coinage abounds in such errors.

Lahusen, op. cit., pp 66ff, identifies the portrait as that of the founder of the gens Domitia, cf. Brutus' family denarius, Cr. 433/2 and no. 337 above; it has the stuffed owl look of most Roman noble images. For a portrait of the moneyer's father, cos. 54, great-great-grandfather of Nero, see the aureus Cr. 519/1. It was no doubt from this cruel and arrogant family that Nero derived his nastier genes. The type commemorates the moneyer's crushing naval defeat in the Adriatic of the Triumvirs' admiral, Domitus Calvinus, in the previous year.

This remarkable reverse, revived by Vespasian, can hardly be connected in a family sense with the moneyer's earlier galley type, see previous coin, since meanwhile he had after Philippi changed allegiance and attached himself firmly to Antony, who made him governor of Bithynia from spring - summer 40 and whom he served devotedly until the eve of Actium when he joined Octavian out of dislike of Cleopatra. From winter 41 - spring 40 Antony was with Cleopatra, first in Tarsus then in Alexandria, spent summer in Greece and passed to Brundisium in autumn. This issue, stylistically linked with Cr. 520, cornucopiae and globe, must belong as an Eastern coinage to the first part of 40 and will commemorate what Antony publicised as his diplomatic victory over Cleopatra, whose subventions in money and ships (together with those of Ahenobarbus) will have replaced the triumviral fleet destroyed by Ahenobarbus himself. The star will stand for the East (Oriens) in general, as on the aureus, Cr. 528/2a CMRR pl. 113, 14 (under Antony's head; post-Brundisium).

- 390 Quintus Labienus. Denarius, moving Eastern mint 40, AR 3.88 g. Q.(LABIE)NVS - PARTHICVS IMP around bare head of Labienus r., with marked side-whiskers and chin-beard in three strands; border of dots. Rev. Parthian light cavalry horse, mane cropped, tail long, standing r., bridled, saddled and girthed; breast and crupper harness pass over rump and withers, where they are decorated with phalerae, and meet under saddle, from which hangs long bow-case; plain exergual line. Border of dots. C. Hersh, The Coinage of Quintus Labienus Parthicus, SNR 56, 1980, 11e (this coin) Cr. 524/2 B. Atia 3 C. 2

Exceedingly rare, probably fewer than forty denarii existing, thirty-four recorded by Hersh. An excellent portrait in high relief of this celebrated renegade and a beautiful and instructive reverse. Right side of legend not struck up, otherwise toned and extremely fine 28,000.-

Q. Labienus, self-styled Emperor and traitor to Caesar like his father, was raising support from Brutus and Cassius at the court of Orodes II of Parthia, the king who used Crassus' head as a prop in a play, when he was marooned in 42 by their destruction at Philippi. Having won over the king to his hopeless cause, with a large Parthian force he invaded Syria with success in early 40 while Antony was with Cleopatra in Egypt and with the aid of disgruntled veterans of Brutus' army, for whom his aurei and denarii were struck, reached as far as Caria. Fortune accompanied him for a year until in spring - summer 39 he was entirely overwhelmed by a great triumviral army. Fleeing from the débacle, he was captured in disguise in Cilicia and very appropriately put to death by a freedman of Caesar's. The type of his coins, in style like Brutus', like his cognomen, recalls his Parthian masters, as does his beard, unless grown in mourning for Caesar's murderers. It seems to have been impossible to return beardless from Parthia, witness Demetrius II of Syria.

Rare. Well-struck on large flan, toned. Slight striking crack behind head, otherwise extremely fine 6,000.-

It seems not previously to have been noted that this trophy is copied in almost every detail from the typologically unique reverse of the portrait aureus of Brutus imp., Cr. 507/1b, of late 42, an interpretation to be supplemented by Cr. 501 and especially the earlier trophy type of 43/42 with Q. Caepio Brutus, Cr. 504, which shows a Thracian helmet and sword in unmistakable profile, and Cr. 503 which with its two barbarian captives can refer only to Brutus' conquest of the Thracian Bessi. This can only make sense in the context of 37 when it is realized that Antony had had no share in Ventidius' Parthian triumph of 38 and yet must have been involved in the suppression of Q. Labienus' rebel Roman detachments, including Brutus' new Thracian clients, distributed over south-east Asia Minor. Brutus' aureus shows the galleys which would have been involved in his attack on Lycia, while Antony's may relate to naval warfare along the Cilician coast. The Macedonian shield may be the final clue; in 42, Brutus murdered C. Antonius, procos. des. in Macedonia, in revenge for Cicero's death, having already won over to the republican cause the Macedonian legions over which he had titular authority. Antony would have relished destroying any of Labienus' units which had served in Macedonia under Brutus and contributed to his brother's capture and execution and the irony of reviving his dead enemy's type for his own third imperatorial acclamation would have appealed to him. Alternatively, Antony continued at a remove of five or six years the prosecution of the tyrannicides' tribal campaigns in northern Greece in an unrecorded military activity and his moneyers simply copied an existing precedent with total indifference to its implications; it is true that Antony had begun to establish a strong naval presence in Greece at this time.

The reverse die has been recut from a larger eagle and the obverse has a die guidance pellet in centre. The flat surfaces of these coins suggest that neither side, i.e., army or fleet, was intended to seem dominant, although the galley, with its consecrated sceptre, is no doubt meant for Antony's flagship.

"He has restored the laws and statutes of the Roman people": in 30 Octavian was granted tribunician power, perhaps for life, and in 28 as censor purged the Senate and was himself created princeps senatus, though he had to wait until Lepidus' death in 13/12 to become pontifex maximus, with the post, as supreme interpreter of Roman law, which had been the basis of Julius Caesar's constitutional power. For over 100 years, since the assassination of Tiberius Gracchus in 133, culminating, with brief periods of exhaustion, in the series of civil wars which followed Caesar's crossing of the Rubicon in 49 and continued almost without interruption until 31 and Actium, murder, proscription, outlawry and armed insurrection had made up the common currency of Roman politics. It was Octavian's brief to re-establish a framework of law and equity more just than Sulla's and less insubstantial than Caesar's, by breaking up his own and Antony's vast armies and redistributing land to their veterans, 29, and reordering Italy and the provinces, old and new, 31-27 and onwards. In 27 he was given by the Senate the unprecedented name, hitherto used only in religious contexts, of Augustus, "endowed with increase". The Republic was restored, because at bottom the new powers were theoretically at the disposal of the Senate and renewable only by that supreme source of Roman law. It was in the midst of this period of "peace, retrenchment and reform", when Virgil's age of gold, the Saturnia regna, could be thought to be renewed, that our piece was struck to advertise Octavian, in juristic pose, as highest guarantor of the rule of law.

This aureus must for date and mint-place be associated with the cistophori with reverse of Pax attributed to Ephesus, Sutherland, Cistophori of Augustus, Group I. It bears the same title, COS VI, for 28, the last year under the old name of (Octavian) Caesar divi. f. and its reverse legend is explicitly linked in spirit with the obverse legend of the cistophori which add to the obverse legend of our coin LIBERTATIS VINDEX, protector and restorer of liberty, a sentiment revived by Vespasian in almost identical circumstances exactly a century later with the sestertius of 71, S. P. Q. R. ADSERTORI LIBERTATIS PVBL, C. 519 (for discussion of which, see Michael Grant, Roman Imperial Money, 1972). Stylistically aureus and cistophorus are identical, the same engraver having been employed on both coinages, his work being especially evident on the cistophori Sutherland op. cit. pl. I, 30a (obv. 21) and 42a (obv. 28) and, probably, pl. 2, 60a (obv. 42). Ephesus had been as much as any place Antony's capital and his chief tax collecting point, Appian BC 5, 6, 26-7, if he continued from his celebrated post-Philippi razzia, and the logical place with Pergamum for Octavian to locate his new pan-Asian tetradrachm (3-denarius) coinage. Distribution point, yes, even mint, but the dies are nothing but Italian. They are epigraphically linked by the characteristic sporadically recurring long I, P and F and the idiosyncratic long serpentine S to the Rome AV and AR of 29-27, RIC 264-277, especially the last [totally misunderstood by Giard, CBN p. 44] and by portrait style of late, specifically Roman, republican type to the asses of 16-6 and, eventually, to the reformed coinage of Lugdunum after 7/6. The message of our aureus, finally, would have little meaning outside Italy except to cives Romani in the provinces (whereas cistophoric Pax would speak to everyone), but would be very potent at Rome. The dies for both aureus and cistophori, then, were made at Rome; the cistophori were for practical purposes, from tax bullion collected there, probably struck at Ephesus from imported dies; the aureus, designed to address war-weary, condottieri-battered Italy, was struck at Rome and distributed locally and, to judge from its rarity today, only to senatorials and equites.

The dies for most of the cistophorus coinage, with the exception of Sutherland's Groups 3 and 4, which have Antiochene affinities, were engraved at Rome and for this issue by no more than two or three die-cutters; our coin, recording the diplomacy-won return of captured Roman standards from Parthia in 20, comes from an obverse die clearly influenced by, if not from the hand of, nine years later, the engraver of the previous aureus, no. 400; note the small mouth and delicate, slightly receding chin of Augustus.

H.-M. von Kaenel, SB May 1978, vol. 110, pp. 39-44, correctly identifies the reverse figure as Gaius in the rôle of one re-establishing the validity of the Augustan dispensation, but fails to identify the anniversary involved by deriving it from Octavian's receiving the name Augustus in 27 B.C. If, to follow Dio Cassius and Suetonius, Gaius sought senatorial approval of his mandate at the beginning of the reign in 37, such a validation could have been given a propitious fiftieth anniversary by looking back to 12 B.C. when Augustus at last became Pontifex Maximus, an office always shown on Gaius' aes, in broken succession from Caesar and finalized his reorganisation of the senatorial and equestrian orders, culminating in a lectio senatus of, at the latest, 11 B.C.

The reverse displays the Palladium, the ancient protective fetish of Troy allegedly brought to Italy by Aeneas. The coinage of Claudius, as Grant rightly supposed in RIM, pp. 166-175, is rich in puns and recondite, though not necessarily obscure, references of a sort which would readily spring to his pedantic mind. CONSTANTIA, elsewhere with Minerva as devotion to military virtues, is here both devotion to the memory of Antonia, shown with corn-wreath as Ceres, emblem of growth, rebirth and abundance, and determination to maintain the annona, the essential corn-supply to Rome, of which Ceres is the ultimate guarantor, in the same way that Antonia's other reverse in AV and AR, two garlanded lighted torches, signifies a sacrifice to Ceres, a rite which is indicated on her dupondius on the reverse of which Claudius is shown as a priest; nor, as the first emperor to stress Augusti and Augusta on the coinage, would be unaware that augustus is cognate with auctus, "endowed with increase".

In 51 Nero, adopted by Claudius in 50, at the age of fourteen already proclaimed consul designatus, qualified to join the Iuvenes, the body of young nobles established by Augustus on the model of Greek epheboi to give compulsory training in military and athletic exercises to Rome's future leaders, and was obviously made captain (princeps), cf. AV and AR with additional legend EQVESTER ORDO, RIC 78-79. The dies, with their characteristic epigraphy and wedge-shaped stops, were engraved at Rome as part of a series advertising Claudius' new marriage, cf. RIC 119, which is perhaps best seen, with its mixture of Greek and Italian propaganda, as a bridge of tetradrachms/3-denarii pieces between military pay and normal Asiatic circulating media, distributed at Pergamum and Ephesus.

- A close examination of the coinage of Vitellius reveals that all his three mints, Rome, Gaul and Spain, worked closely together, possibly with exchange of personnel, until a little after Vitellius' receiving at Rome the title of Augustus, 18th July 69, Tacitus, Histories, 2. 91, when the provincial mints ceased striking. Like Rome, they would have coined for Vitellius only after the death of Otho and his own Senatorial recognition, 19th April. For this date, a new interpretation of the above coin would help, Suetonius, 9. 9., records that as one of Vitellius' armies began its advance on Italy, February - March, an eagle, swooping down from the right, hovered over the standards and accompanied them. This most happy augury appears on the coin in modified form and is exactly repeated in AV and AR in Gaul, BMC pl. 62, 1-2 and again on certain sestertii of Rome, BMC 53 where named Mars Victor, illust. Mazzini pl. 65, 56, and BMC pl. 63, 4, this time in a more conventionalized treatment. In addition in Spain and Gaul Mars carries, not a spear, but a praetor's rod to punish crime (vindicare), Galba's murder, and install liberty, see no. 279 note. These issues can hardly date from before Bedriacum, the Roman (with AVG) certainly after July. The portrait style of our coin places it (without AVG) at the moment in July when Vitellius' nose became, iconographically, hooked.

There is a small group of three Vespasian aurei with Titus head reverses described in BMC as of Antioch, 496 and 496n (Paris) pl. 18, 5-6, and Alexandria, 525 pl. 19, 14. They all however belong to one issue characterized by distinctive scalloping of truncations, clumsy lettering in high relief, and strange letter forms for the last G in Vespasian's legend, taken in the case of BMC 496 for an aegis, together with a positioning of idiosyncratic heads that pushes the back of the cranium almost against the legend while leaving a remarkably wide field before the face. There is no resemblance to the polished work of Antioch, but there is an exact similitude in portraits and technique to Alexandrian billon tetradrachms of the year 2, 69-70. Our coin is of the same issue and copied from [or from dies cut by their engraver(s)] such pieces as, for obverse, Dattari 360 and, for reverse, Datt. 357, and Seaby, Greek Imperial Coins p. 71, 743 (Eirene = Datt. 357) down to the last detail, notably Pax/Eirene's bouquet of corn-ears, appropriate to the Alexandrian wheat trade, but originally a poor copy of Pax's olive-branch in the early Rome AV and AR, BMC 20-21, with Vitellian portrait. The odd letter ϵ or φ or π is a corruption of (L)B at the edge of the broad reservation allowed for it on the tetradrachm. Vespasian was at Alexandria in late 69 and early 70 and cos. II in the latter year.

Such "sports" as the above are seen occasionally, an example in the Lockett collection springing to mind. Test pieces for dies may be expected struck on iron or lead, or as impressions in clay, but in this case it is a question of fun on the production line, modern mint personnel playing exactly the same games, confecting impossible combinations of types, denominations or metals, sometimes with an eye to future sale.

This is a revival of the type of 74, in which year Vespasian transferred the famous Greek bronze statue of a calf by Myron, fl. c. 480-455 B.C., to his new temple of Pax. It can only be the usual pun of Italia/Vitelia, signifying "pax per Italiam" five years after the violent disturbances of 69, and simultaneously refers to the 120th anniversary of Voconius' "vitulus" type for Divus Iulius, see no. 391, cf. While hedging bets by giving an as from this obverse die to Rome, 151 pl. 48, 4, BMC would attribute this issue to Lugdunum, to which perhaps belongs a very small group of sestertii and AE 2 of quite different fabric; this coin is in fact a supreme example in miniature of the best Rome work by an engraver who also cut the reverse die for BMC 307 and 320, shared by Titus and Domitian Caesar. VICTORIANAVALIS as legend ends with Vespasian cos. VIII and Titus cos VI, 78; from 79 victories on prows (or without) with legend VICTORIA AVGVST refer no longer to the Jewish war but to Agricola's successful campaigns in Britain, and specifically to the capture of the isle of Anglesey (Mona), autumn 78.

The type of Venus disarming Mars refers emblematically to love's overcoming war, i.e., peace, and indeed at this period the only war was in remote Britain. Venus' pose is related to the "de Fréjus" type and in this case is probably shorthand for a statue or painting, cf. LIMC II, 2, pl. 27, 239 (column, sword for helmet; hellenistic gem-stone) and pl. 412, 376 (Neronian wall-painting from Pompeii VII, Casa di Marte e Venere, Mars bare-headed with Venus and Cupid, who tries on helmet).

Until late 82, Domitian's coinage was a continuation of 'Titus', competent but rather dull, but with the monetary reform was introduced an interesting series of dynastic and personal types continued into late 83, when Domitian celebrated his triumph over the German tribe of the Chatti. From this time and the following year comes an explosion of style and subject continuing into 85 with silver multiples and female images of stunning beauty. The impetus would have been Domitian's, since in 84 fell from the middle of the year anniversaries of great importance, the eightieth of the much-admired Tiberius' German campaigns, 4-6, and the fifth of Vespasian's death (with fourth of his consecration and thirteenth of his triumph de Iudaeis), but the accomplishment was that of a single die-engraver principally in the precious metal coinage who gave to Domitian and his women an unparalleled beauty and theatrical panache. He reverses the legends, abandoning the clumsy Flavian practice of reading AV and AR outwardly r. to l., gives Domitian a paludamentum as here, or Minerva's aegis, BMC pl. 60, 15, remakes the pedestrian Minerva head, reverse of 82, BMC, pl. 60, 3 into the statuesque marvel of BMC pl. 60, 12, and creates the fine German triumph reverse of our coin and the prototypical German female captive of BMC p. 307n (Santamaria sale 1926) and Montague collection 232, from the same obverse die as ours, continued in later issues on silver multiples and aurei.

This magnificent reverse, seemingly known only from this specimen, provides us with a record of a monument which has entirely disappeared, but of which fragments may survive at Rome beneath Regiones VII to X where Domitian's architectural remains tend to cluster. Taken together with the German female captive reverse which continues to the end of the reign, COS XVII, we can assemble the missing pieces into a standing marble trophy flanked by two seated captives, one male, conventionally bound and struggling, the other female, submissive and in mourning for lost liberty. As on all Roman trophies from Republican times the arms of the subject enemy are carefully identified by detail (see description above), but here, above all, the type of captive is shown to be exactly that of the defeated Chatti of the middle Rhine district (Hesse), as described by Tacitus, Germania 29, 30-32, 35, 36, 38. Physically powerful, with a muscularity rendered in almost baroque manner on the coin, long-haired and long-bearded, dressed in barbarian trousers, he struggles to free himself; the treatment is entirely sculptural, as on the first issues of the Germania reverse, and will have been inspired by the actual trophy completed in this year. There is here little resemblance to the conventional trophy reverses of Titus of 79-80, but a strong link with Vespasian's aureus reverse of. 72, BMC 402, DE IVDAEIS, without captive but also very detailed, even the disposition of the legend and the number of letters (with AE taken as a single character) being copied.

The coin can be placed at the very end of the first issue of the year, Carradice 84.1; the obverse legend reading outwardly puts it just before the next two series, Carr. 84, 2-3, to which it is closely related by weight and style. It comes from the hand of the same master of no. 454 above who was already working in 2a with two l. facing busts, Carr. 8 and 9, revs. eagle and Minerva bust, as well as with r. facing bust with aegis in both gold, Carr. 7, and silver, Carr. 6. Carradice has unfortunately misunderstood the wide weight range of the AV of 84, c. 7.50 to c. 7.85 g, does not understand the stylistic and die links, and breaks up the homogenous group of Domitian and his women, Domitia and Julia, putting the latter's coins, after the first issue of 82-83 of unevolved style, to 88-89. Alexandrian issues for Domitia in the years 4 and 5, 84 to 86, as often, inspired by Roman emissions, help also to indicate an early date. In fact the artistic development in 84 is both rapid and substantial, in keeping with Domitian's character, and can be shown thus:

After issue of 82-83 (legend ending DOMIT r. to l., rev. ending AVGVST r. to l.), c. mid-84 Domitian AV bust l. (3 obv. dies, Carr. 8 and 9 and 454 above. From slightly earlier in the year, for Domitia:

The obverse type is closely modelled on the Augustan cistophorus of Sutherland's Group V, cf. for example COA 184, pl. 4, down to the slightly wavy truncation, the legend being a conflation of Augustus' obverse and reverse inscriptions. The reverse takes Augustus' coin-ears, on this specimen still literally a spray, and puts them in Hadrian's hands as Renovator or (through restriking) reviver of the cistophorus coinage, remade in Roman guise by Augustus and rather moribund after the Flavians. The anniversary, real or supposed, will be the one hundred and fiftieth. Metcalf speaks of this mint's issues' "medallic aspect" and "superb engraving".

Drowned in the Nile in 130 at the age of about twenty, Hadrian's lover was deified in Egypt, Greece and Asia. In this instance the dead hero is shown as a psychopomp, a Guide of Souls like Hermes whose caduceus he bears. Horseman of death, he rides in the landscape of the beyond, his cloak blown in the divine wind; he wears the lotus-flower, symbol of death and oblivion. Despite the mint, the treatment of the subject is entirely hellenic.

Apparently unrecorded in silver. Grey tone, superb. 4,000.-

The quinarii of Pius are excessively rare in both metals; the silver are:

1) RIC 144 (of this year ?) rev. Seated Hercules, for the the twentieth anniversary of the consecration of Hadrian's sacellum (?) or statue of Hercules Gaditanus.

2) This coin, for the fourth largesse of the reign.

3) RIC 266 (c) (157) rev. Victory, for the end of the Dacian war.

Only the last is of conventional type, suggesting that in Pius' time, unlike both before and after, it was regarded as a day's distribution coin, as the rarity would suggest, for whatever occasion might seem suitable.

Caracalla's portrait is securely tied to eastern denarii and cistophori issues ending in 202 and the reverse is closely related to the first issue of Severus at Antioch, differing only in the orientation of the animal's haunch beneath the eagle. The presence of CEB, pace Bellinger, p. 22, obviously does not in this case indicate a later date; the disposition of dots in the obv. legend is precisely as that of Bellinger's Severus 1 and 2. The rev. legend is completed by AΠ, scarcely an abbreviated title, but perhaps rather a contraction of Apamea, for which this would be a complimentary issue, struck at Antioch.

Very rare. Beautiful dark green patina, slightly smoothed in fields, and an enchanting portrait from the hand of the last great engraver of sestertius dies. Extremley fine 13,000.-

From the later issues of aurei and sestertii of Caracalla to the early issues of Severus Alexander the work of a master die-cutter can be identified by stylistic traits; he it is, for example, cutting the best portrait of Diadumenian, BMC 157. His apogée is reached at that exceptional moment in 220 when the Orontes flows into the Tiber and the mint is poised between Roman and Syrian styles of portraiture; the subjects are the lovely young wives of Elagabalus, his formidable female blood relatives and the misplaced aesthete and religious enthusiast himself, less harmful than Nero but with a similar interest in the appearance of his coinage and its value as a medium of peaceful propaganda. Indeed, from the last period of Septimius Severus to about 224 there is a dearth of bronze medallions, the often ambitious sestertii taking their place.

Iulia Maesa, grandmother of Elagabalus, died 225

RIC 269 BMC -- cf. p. 541, 76n (Paris = C. 43) C. 43 (probably the same dies)
Excessively rare, perhaps the second known specimen. Nearly extremely fine 3,000.-

The issue seems connected with the second largesse of Elagabalus, given on his arrival at Rome, when the actual appearances of members of the new first family became known to the mint. The reverse type is defective, Pudicitia not completing her customary gesture, and is, therefore, probably from the same die as the Paris specimen ("levant la main droite").

The third largesse followed so quickly, in summer (?) 240, after the second given in the same year that it was obviously good sense to update the existing reverse die, as with our Verus medallion, no. 506 above. The title Pius, assumed in spring, will refer to devotion to the memory of the Gordiani Africani and that of Felix to the crushing of another African revolt at about the same time. The medallions of Gordian III are extraordinarily aggressive and bellicose, like those of Severus Alexander, another young boy under the control of a powerful mother. Until 241 his policies were directed by Maecia Faustina, daughter of Gordian I.

Diademed and draped bust r., seen from front, stephane decorated with wave and pellet pattern, hair braided in six ridges and carried up behind in double plait to back of head; border of dots. Rev. PIETAS AVGVSTAE Pietas, veiled and draped, standing almost to front, head nearly facing, in attitude of prayer, both arms raised and spread, palms open; on each side, in background, youth in tunic, with long palm-branch over each shoulder, standing turned towards Pietas, and in foreground, draped and veiled girl in similar pose, one hand open at side, other, l. or r., extended to touch Pietas. Gneecchi -- cf. 2, pl. 107, 10 with a varied interpretation of the same subject, and 3 pl. 108, 1, Pudicitia with two children (= Toynbee, RM pl. 45, 6). Apparently unique and unrecorded. Superb dark green patina, a lovely medallion of the finest style of the age and in a remarkable state of preservation. Extremely fine 40,000.-

Pietas at prayer, with or without a child before her, is a common type in the coinage of Otacilia Severa and this medallion is a development of the same theme. Whether the young people beside Pietas are Otacilia's presumptive own children junior to Philip II, or representative of the rising generation of the populus romanus, is difficult to say, given the extreme solipsism of empresses like Faustina II whose own children are often shown on coins or medallions and the wonderful general vagueness of personifications in Roman art in the later period. The youths appear to be carrying the palm-branches of Hilaritas, signifying public rejoicing and happy future lives, and the girls touch Pietas as though to acquire some of her numen or essential divine quality. The small group of bureaucratic and military recipients would have known. Pace Eusebius, Hist. Ecc. 6, 34-36, there appears to be no trace of Christian influence in the type, but there is a peaceful quality in the coinage of Philip I which contrasts with surrounding reigns; the final interpretation should perhaps be, the empress' benign and devoted attention to the interests and welfare of young subjects of both sexes.

This coin illustrates the great confusion into which the Rome mint, or at least the precious metal section, had fallen during the outbreak of plague which was ravaging the empire at this time. Hybrids are common, with early obverses of Decius, for example, being found with late reverses of Gallus. The reverse belongs to the first, brief (say, June 251) issue of Gallus aug. and Hostilian caes., Volusian not yet being caes. The laureate obverse indicates that a die had been prepared for Hostilian aug. (with which would have been associated dies for Volusian caes., RIC 129-130), but the legend is stuck half-way between his style as Caesar and a tentative one as Augustus, and is moreover in composition absolutely irregular, even though the letters themselves are perfectly normal, since (a) "Hostilian's" cognomen was Quintus, cf. sestertius RIC 222, QVINTO FELIX, and his style usually a form of C. Val. Host. Mes. Quintus, HOSTILIAN, and still less, MOSTILIAN, being unacceptable, (b) the contractions for VALENS are VAL. or VALES, not VALE ("farewell") and (c) C. (Gaius) is never written as here, G, i.e., as pronounced. The legend is therefore no more than incompetent apprentice work as arranged, applied with normal letter punches to a die properly prepared with a portrait of Hostilian Augustus.

In Latin, to be anchored is ad ancoram constitere, from constitere, to stop, stand firm, keep one's ground; in fluctibus constitere (Caesar), to remain steady in a stormy sea. Carausius' pun is clear: while most ships of state dash to and fro, his (Laetitia, Felicitas) is firmly fixed even amid hostility threatening all around. A mooring is a statio, also signifying a naval station, viz., classica, and it is not unreasonable to suppose that these coins, proportionately not uncommon among Carausian denarii, were intended as a donative for the fleet.

By failing to notice that the letters in the field, A, B, Γ and Δ, of certain Alexandrian aurei are issue marks and that the form of wreath-leaves and ties must attribute them to a later period, RIC VI has dated too early several of them and broken up homogeneous groups. Our coin, together with RIC 52, must join the aurei of p. 677, 96-98 which must in turn occupy a shorter time-span, c. 309-11, and p. 671, 61 (B) will be restricted to 306-307. A suggested order would be: A, 305-306, B, 306-307, Γ, 308-309 and Δ, 309 (early) to c. 311.

The position of Maximinus, a protégé of Galerius, was always irregular and his titulature is often confusing. He was cos. in 307, aug. in 310, cos II in 311 and cos. III in 313. In May 310 fell his quinquennium and with this vainglorious reverse "to the Jovian enlarger of the entire world" he anticipates both his extorting the title of Augustus from a dying Galerius and a second consulship. The obverse type is developed from the earlier common consular folles of Maxentius.

Ex "Mediterranean hoard" c. 1959

The occasion of the issue is uncertain. Later pieces in the hoard, which closed in 308, can be associated with a donativum given on the occasion of Maxentius' entry into his first consulship, April 308. The terminus quem ante must be somewhat after 25th July when Constantine declared himself Augustus. Constantine had just married Maxentius' sister Fausta and was in uneasy alliance with him; he is styled "prince of the youth", corresponding to Maxentius' title of Princeps Invictus, for lack of a better title, since neither Constantine nor Maxentius could be thought of as having wholly legitimate rights to power save as sons of Augusti. It may have been Maxentius' one-sided assumption of the title of Augustus that prompted the donativum in which our multiple was included. Both Hadrian and Marcus Aurelius had given accession donativa of 1000 denarii (= 40 aurei) per praetorian, and Maxentius (for which see the 2-aurei of Commodus, and 8-aurei of Claudius II) could hardly have given less, and in readily portable form. The reverse contraction TVTI (instead of TVT. or TVTIS in full) is unusual.

Constantine I the Great, as Augustus 307-337

- 590 Medallion miliarensis (?), Siscia 320 - ? 321, AR 6.20 g. IMP CONSTANTINVS P F AVG . Cuirassed bust l., seen from front, wearing crested helmet, with wreath-ties, decorated with palmette, vine or flower motif with tendrils becoming volutes, and bearing spear, held in r. hand, over r. shoulder and shield, with wave-and-pellet border and central boss containing pellet, over l. Rev. VOTAORBISETVRBISSENETPR; in exergue, SIS . Unique for Constantine, one other specimen only known, for Crispus, from this mint; seven specimens only of this denomination and type recorded. Excessively rare and of considerable importance in monetary history. Minor striking crack,
extremely fine 15,000.-

Illustrated on colour plate 11

This important medallion appears to have been struck to commemorate Constantine's quinquennialia. It was previously known only from five specimens for Aquileia, RIC 80, where it was struck in the names of all four rulers, Licinius I, just before his disappearance in Civil War II from the western coinage, Constantine I and II and Crispus, and one for Siscia (Aquileia Museum; omitted by RIC), the helmeted bust with spear being employed by both Constantine I and Licinius, RIC 82 and 80; it is to those last that the reverse stars may refer. The reverse legend and type seem in part derivative from the VICTORIAE LAETAE PRINC PERP / VOT PR billion issues of 318-320 (oddly enough, not struck at Aquileia, though common at Siscia). Toynbee, p. 38, links a Tres Monetae AR of Crispus for Aquileia, Gn. pl. 29, 11, also struck on a c. 6.54 g. weight standard (interpreted by Carson as an abortive attempt to establish a miliarensis coinage at fifty to the pound, cf. L in rev. field of RIC 80-81) to a supposed mint visit, and in fact the reverse type could be interpreted as a round altar (sometimes with flames, RIC 80-81) set on a moneyer's anvil. The influence on the general schema of the reverse of the type of the successful Sassanian silver coinage, for example, the attended or plain fire-altar on the dirhems of Constantine's contemporary, Shapur II, cannot be discounted.

Constantine's consciousness of a divine mission was evident from 312, and in 325 he was to preside at the Council of Nicaea. The obverse iconographically owes much, with its diadem and heaven-regarding pose, to the coinage of Lysimachus, the reverse probably too, with its complicated and repetitive type of Victory / Victory enthroned with cornucopiae and shield visibly related to the type of Athena on the diadochus' money.

- 592 Light miliarensis, Sirmium 324-326, early in the period, AR 4.25 g. CONSTANTINVS MAX AVG . The figures under arch type continues in silver under Constantine's family and Valentinian I's. It is closely related to the figures within arcades motif frequent on late Roman and early Byzantine silverware, see J. Kent and K. Painter, Wealth of the Roman World, 1977, pls. 180-2 (Cyprus Treasure). There seem to be several issues of this denomination at the Balkan and nearer Asian mints from the period 324-326, beginning while the court was at Sirmium, not well recorded in RIC, Gneecchi I and C.E. King in RSCV being useful. They are all very rare and were perhaps originally distribution pieces for ceremonial occasions, Crispus and Constantine II being joint consuls in 324.

For similar shields, see no. 529 above. The armour worn by Crispus is modelled on that of the Persian cavalry and is a light form of that of the Cataphractarius, the original of the mediaeval knight. The occasion for striking will have been a donativum for victories won over the Franks and Alamans on the Rhine frontier, presumably in the same year.

Extraordinary care was given to the production of triumphal billon of Crispus and Constantine II at Treviri with elaborate motifs reminiscent of those introduced to the normal Roman currency by Maximinus Daia. Here cuirass and helmet are treated medallically, the helmet of distinctive type being almost certainly that worn by Crispus in cavalry engagements, his father's being shown on RIC 208a.

This simple scene of shopping which now seems enigmatic offers a few clues: a table with stretcher, rather than a permanent marble or brick stand, suggests a temporary booth, just as the grand decoration of the arcade implies a public building rather than a row of shops set into the ground floor of an insula. What is proposed, since we hardly know what contorniates were for, though we know what they were associated with, by Zadoks-Jitta, cited in Alföldi, p. 75, is "Verkauf von Kontorniaten", "selling contorniates", which seems an ingenious solution, given that the objects themselves were always connected, literally, with fun and games and heroes and superstitions, and presumably would be sold publicly on occasions of popular festivity.

Apollonius of Tyana in Cappadocia was a neo-Pythagorean mystic and sage who died at a great age during the principate of Nerva; his Life by Philostratus survives. As a guru with Christ-like powers and prophetic abilities, he had a strong appeal in late classical times; his pose on the contorniate is that characteristic of a philosopher addressing his pupils. It is no surprise that his portrait resembles Julian's, since the emperor, roughly contemporaneous and himself honoured on contorniates with a portrait taken from his AE3, favoured a philosopher's beard, his witty reply to his detractors being entitled Misopogon, or, the Beard-hater, and since the contorniates as a class drew heavily on centuries of Roman, and sometimes Greek, monetary originals for their inspiration.

Very rare and a beautiful, if crowded, reverse composition. Good green patina, very fine 4,000.-

Illustrated on colour plate 13

The reverse, in its freedom of line and easy assimilation of first-century motifs, very much resembles the excellent, though also often cramped, designs on silverware from such great services as the Mildenhall Treasure, cf. Wealth of the Roman world, p. 34, 56 and 59, or p. 50, 99 (Carthage Treasure), even as late as Heraclius-Constans II pp. 96f, 160-161 (from Scythia). The types are evocative, in their choice of pagan icons, of good fortune in all its guises and consequent abundance and prosperity.

Alföldi 350, pl. 143, 5-12
Very rare and interesting. Excellent green-brown patina, extremely fine 8,000.-

Illustrated on colour plate 13

Ex Sternberg sale 17, 1986, 585.

In ancient times athletes trained to the sound of live music, each mode being appropriate to a given set of emotions and activities, flute-players being also employed at public sacrifices, presumably for the calming effect of their notes on the sacrificial beasts. Trajan, in this case with an anachronistic form of titulature, was chosen, like Caracalla or Nero, as the obverse of very many contorniate types because of his circus-building reputation, enshrined on some of his coins which would undoubtedly have been preserved as keepsakes or lucky pieces.

The legends can be expanded to: (obv.) Sal(lustius?) vir clarissimus domino nostro Valentiniano (sc. II) perpetuo pio augusto and (rev.) Paulinus vir clarissimus praefectus urbi (or, urbis) feci. Anicius Paulinus, a member of the celebrated noble family of the Anicii, was proconsul of Campania in c. 378/9 and patron of Capua before becoming praefectus urbis Romae for the year 380, Prosopography of the later Roman Empire I, p. 678 s.v. Paulinus 12. Sal... may be that Sallustius who as PVR in 387 is found in correspondence with Valentinian II, Theodosius I and Arcadius concerning enlargement of the basilica S. Pauli (fuori le mura) then under construction, PLRE I, p. 797 s.v. Sallustius Valentinian II, titular ruler of Italy, Illyricum and Africa, was in 380 about ten years old and resident in Milan. The praefecti urbi (or, urbis Romae), created by Augustus, acted as chief magistrates cum appointed mayors of the city of Rome. They were always senators, usually ex-consuls, viri clarissimi in the late empire, i.e., those who had held posts granting the illustis rank, and had imperium in the city and command of the police force, the vigiles urbanae. Their general jurisdiction would have included the issue and control of weights and measures. The weight of our piece allows as usual for a drawback of something under 5 % in exchange transactions.

In 488 the Ostrogoth Theoderic undertook to recover Italy for the Roman Empire, a task that suited his half-barbarian military instincts and his Romanising ideals, and which also helped the emperor by drawing the Ostrogoths away from Constantinople. He personally killed the previous ruler of Italy, Odoacer in 493, and acknowledged submission to the Empire by always referring to himself as king rather than emperor.
